THE BATTLE OF THURSDAY, MAY 5.

TODD'S TAVERN, VA., SUNDAY, MAY 8, 1864.

The details of the wonderful three days' battle of the Wilderness, which closed last night just as the blood-red sun went down behind the margin of the Rapidan, will have given you some idea of the labyrinth of action through which its course ran, and the maze of tactics out of which it was evolved; but the battle of the Wilderness must remain, for the present, undescribed, for the reason that it is really indescribable. I remember a pregnant observation of Gen. BURNSIDE, that with us war is only "bushwhacking on a large scale." Now, if this is true of the kind of ground on which many of our battles have been fought, the analogy holds still more forcibly in the wild, tangled pine woods in whose thickets and along whose margins the prodigious Indian fight of Thursday, Friday and Saturday raged.

No man can claim that he saw this battle, and although unscientifically it had a line and formation of its own, it would puzzle even the Commanding General to lay it down on the map. There is something horrible and yet fascinating in the mystery shrouding this struggle of battles ever fought—a battle which no man could see—and whose progress could only be followed by the ear. It is, beyond a doubt, the first time in the history of war, that two great armies have met, each with at least two hundred and fifty pieces of artillery, and yet placed in such circumstances as to make this vast enginery totally useless. Not a score of pieces were called into play in the whole affair, and I may mention it as a fact strikingly illustrative of this battle, that out of the three thousand wounded in the hospitals of HANCOCK'S command alone, not one of the wounds is a shell wound. In like manner our cavalry has been totally useless, as cavalry. In all their engagements the men have been compelled to dismount and fight on foot, and the horse, except for locomotion, has been a hindrance rather than a help. In such circumstances, in the utter impossibility of maneuvering or effecting any grand combination, the difficulty of generalship is enormously increased. It will also be inferred, from the circumstances in which the battle of the Wilderness was fought, that it was quite impossible for it to be decisive in its results. The combat lasted three days, but it might have been prolonged a fortnight longer and still have left the issue undecided. Now that it is ended by the withdrawal of the enemy, though we are hardly justified in calling the result a victory in the positive sense of the word, yet, if it be considered that the enemy was signally foiled in the purpose with which he sought battle in the Wilderness, that he was compelled to fall back, discomfited, and that we are in vigorous pursuit, under circumstances that give us the shorter line of advance on Richmond, even the most cautious and skeptical will admit the grace and scope of the action to be a most substantial advantage to our arms.

When GRANT, on Wednesday night and Thursday morning, threw his army across the Rapidan at Germanna and Ely's Fords, and the labor of a twelvemonth brought him, he thought, The chief consideration that the enemy's fortified position was turned, prompted the flanking movement on the enemy's right rather than on his left, was, doubtless, that a successful movement by the former direction would uncover for us water communications by Aquia Creek and Urbana—an advantage not to be overlooked, and, indeed, indispensable in any protracted march toward Richmond. The disadvantage is, that the line of march southward from the points of crossing leads through a legion in which no General would seek to fight a battle. I mean, of course, the "Wilderness," a wild tract of barren country, overgrown with a thick growth of stunted pine, extending from Chancellorsville up to Mine Run. By changing front by the right, LEE had it in his power, using the Orange and Chancellorsville turnpike and the Orange and Chancellorsville plank-road, to strike us at right angles. The only escape would be to make our passage of the Rapidan a surprise—a conception which was very happily carried out. The march to the river having been made during the night of Wednesday, Thursday morning found the whole army planted safely on the south side of the Rapidan, and well in hand. So complete indeed seems to have been the surprise, that even after the whole army had passed the river, our signal officers reported the rebels still busy on their works on the Rapidan.

But, of course, it was not long before LEE became fully aware of the situation, and he promptly arranged front, and pushed out to strike us by the two roads already named, which, as you will observe, run from west to east, and, strike the road on which we must advance, (the Germanna and Chancellorsville plank-road,) precisely at right angles. This was a masterly movement, for it obliged GRANT to halt, form line of battle, and dispose his force in such a way as to cover the fords, by which all our trains were yet to pass, and which it was absolutely necessary to keep open in order to preserve our line of communication.

This, then, was how it came, strategically, that we were compelled to fight the battle of the Wilderness—an encounter which I am very sure both Gen. GRANT and Gen. MEADE would gladly have avoided, had it been possible to do so. This much credit at least is due to Gen. LEE, whose generalship was one of great boldness and rapidity. Whether Gen. LEE intended merely to delay our advance and gain time for the new combinations necessitated by our successful crossing of the Rapidan, or whether he chose this line as one on which to try the gage of a decisive battle, in the hope of defeating us in the same way as he did in the same region (Chancellorsville) at the same period of last year, is a question which I have no means of determining, although the desperate vigor of the three days' attack would give strong color to the probability of the latter design. And it must be confessed his advantages were great. He crowded us into a restricted triangle, densely wooded, with few roads, which we knew imperfectly, and with the whole of our vast trains yet to be brought over the river. On the other hand, the enemy knew the country; with fifty thousand men he could here do as much as we with a hundred thousand, and he had the strong line of Mine Run, six miles in his rear, to fall back upon in case of repulse. When I say that after three days' fight, in which he with desperate fury threw himself repeatedly against every point of our line—right, left and centre—in the hope of breaking through and rolling us up, he has been compelled to retire discomfited, the sum and substance of the story is told.

Thursday morning found WARREN'S corps (the Fifth) at Old Wilderness tavern, on the Germanna and Chancellorsville plank-road, five miles south of the ford, and SEDGWICK in his rear, on the same road, and extending down to the river. HANCOCK'S corps, on the same day, crossed the river at Ely's Ford, five or six miles further down the river, under orders to move to Shady Grove Church. BURNSIDE'S corps was to remain behind for twenty-four hours at Culpepper, and then join the main column. The maneuvre of the enemy compelled Gen. MEADE to form line of battle north and south, and this was done about a mile west of the Germanna plank-road and parallel to it, SEDGWICK'S corps forming the right and resting on the river at Germanna Ford, and WARREN joining his left. Finding the enemy was determined to make a stand here, the order to HANCOCK to move to Shady Grove Church was countermanded, and he was directed to diverge by what is called the "Brock road," swing round, come up and form the left of the line.

The disposition above given will have shown that there must be for a considerable time a great interval between our centre (WARREN) and our left (HANCOCK)—an interval which could only be filled by HANCOCK swinging round and connecting with WARREN. The attempts of the enemy were mainly directed to getting possession of the plank-road, and planting himself between the two halves of the army. In this he was completely foiled, for WARREN and SEDGWICK held the front firmly until HANCOCK in the afternoon arrived, and completed the line. This was not done without severe loss, especially on the part of WARREN, two of whose divisions, namely, those of WADSWORTH and GRIFFIN, lost each a third of its numbers.

From Chancellorsville, where HANCOCK had bivouacked on Thursday night, he advanced to the intersection of Brock road and the Orange and Chancellorsville plank road, where he found GETTY'S division of the Sixth Corps. Forming line of battle he attacked at 8 o'clock, and fought very severely until 9, engaging HILL'S corps. The enemy held a strong position behind improvised breastworks and was already formed in line of battle, while HANCOCK had great difficulty in getting in as he was marching by the flank to mass, but he stoutly held his position at the cross-roads, from which all the efforts of the enemy could not drive him.

The engagements of Thursday were so far successful that they defeated the purpose of the enemy to advance up the Orange road and penetrate between HANCOCK and WARREN. It was, however, only by the utmost skill and vigor that this was effected, for had the rebels been able to penetrate a mile further they would have achieved their end.

THE BATTLE OF FRIDAY, MAY 6.

Unwilling to remain on the defensive, Gen. GRANT, on Thursday night, ordered a general attack along the whole line for 5 o'clock the next morning. BURNSIDE, who had been hitherto in reserve was ordered in, and HANCOCK, who, as was realized had a severe part to perform, was strengthened by four divisions taken from the Fifth and Sixth Corps, so that he now commanded nearly one-half the army.

Promptly at the hour the flame of battle burst forth all along the line, which, from SEDGWICK'S right to HANCOCK'S left, had an extent of about seven miles.

On the right SEDGWICK attacked, engaging EWELL, who, however, showed a strong front. The two divisions WARREN has left, namely, those of GRIFFIN and CRAWFORD, badly handled yesterday, content themselves with repulsing the rebel attack. WADSWORTH, connecting with HANCOCK'S right, puts forth a desperate valor, leads in person several charges at the head of his division, has two horses shot under him, and is then himself shot in the head and left in the hands of the enemy, but whether dead or alive is not yet known. BURNSIDE, somewhat tardy, is only skirmishing as yet, and has had no serious business. HANCOCK, on the left, attacked promptly at 5 o'clock and gallantly drove the enemy about a mile and a half, taking the rebel line of rifle-pits and five colors. In their turn the rebels attack vigorously, and the ammunition of HANCOCK'S men being exhausted, they are forced back to their original line at 11 o'clock. The enemy even turns the extreme left, formed by FRANK'S brigade of BARLOW'S division, which broke in considerable confusion down the road. This, however, was promptly repulsed, and the enemy prevented from following up his advantage. After this all remained quiet with HANCOCK until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Hitherto HANCOCK had met only the corps of HILL, but at 4 in the afternoon, LONGSTREET'S corps, which had marched twenty-five miles to get into the fight, came up, and LEE prepared to hurl the main weight of his force, with a view of doubling up our left flank, and rolling us back on the enemy. The rebel attack was made at precisely 4½, and was made in four lines, the left on the plank road. It was marked by the greatest vigor, and succeeded in breaking our lines. Part of our breastworks got afire, and a portion of the Third and Fourth Divisions broke. GETTY'S division was, however, promptly formed in rear of the break. The brigade of GARRETT (the galloped himself with distinguished gallantry, and though shot through the arm, would not leave the field,) forming by the left; the brigade of BROOKE by the right. This was effectual in checking the rebel advance, and after forty-five minutes of most desperate fighting, the crisis had passed. The heroism and skill of HANCOCK, and the valor of his command had saved our army. Failing on the left, the rebels repeated their usual tactics by a night assault on our right, and they succeeded in rolling up the brigade of Gen. T. SEYMOUR, who was himself captured, but the break did not extend to the other portions of the line, and though some confusion was inseparable from a night assault, the rebels had gained nothing after all.

The rebels expended their utmost strength in the battle of Friday, and failed to accomplish any decisive results. It was obvious that they were in very great strength, for they showed a full line along our whole front, extending beyond our right and overlapping our left.

SKIRMISHES OF SATURDAY, MAY 7.

It was, therefore, difficult on Friday night to say whether the enemy would resume the attack or retire. In case of the former alternative, a new and stronger line, considerably contracted, was selected on Friday evening. The attack, however, was not resumed in the morning, and reconnoissances and skirmishes made during the day along the whole line, though developing on the part of the enemy a strong skirmish line, left little doubt that the main portion of his army was retiring.

In this state of facts, Gen. GRANT formed the determination of throwing forward this army by a rapid night march toward Spottsylvania. Accordingly, a march of 15 miles was made during the night, and this morning finds the whole army massed at Todd's Tavern. We shall doubtless, today, feel forward toward Spottsylvania Court-house, where we shall probably find the enemy in position.

Although we have no reliable returns of our losses in the three days' fight, it is probable they will reach 15,000. The loss of the enemy cannot very much from that figure, and we have taken 2,000 prisoners.

THE BATTLE OF SUNDAY, MAY 8.

NEAR SPOTTSYLVANIA COURT-HOUSE, VA., MONDAY, MAY 9—2 P. M.

I have this morning returned from our advanced line of battle, which lies within two and a half miles of Spottsylvania Court-house, the enemy contesting in force. Our army reached this position yesterday morning, WARREN'S corps having the advance, and heavy fighting took place during the day. It was hoped that we could have reached Spottsylvania before the enemy would be able to make that point; but in the foot race which the two armies ran on Saturday night, from the battle ground of the Wilderness, the rebels beat us. LONGSTREET, it appears, started at 12 P. M. of Saturday; our advance left at 10 P. M. The two columns marched by parallel roads, but LONGSTREET'S corps had time to arrive and form line of battle, and when our force was thrown out to feel the enemy this morning, he was found in position. Our first attack was made by BARTLETT'S brigade of GRIFFIN'S division, on the right of the road, with ROBINSON'S division on his left. BARTLETT had been ordered by Gen. WARREN to attack in column, under the belief that only rebel cavalry would be found. Instead of this, however, he ran on the whole of LONGSTREET'S corps, and his brigade, already reduced by the fearful losses of the three days' battle of the Wilderness, was frightfully cut up. One of his regiments, the First Michigan, went in a hundred strong and came out with but twenty-five, having lost three-fourths of its numbers in fifteen minutes. ROBINSON'S division, which held the left, was also roughly handled, and broke in disorder. Seeing this, Gen. WARREN seized the division flag and rallied the men in person. Fresh troops were thrown in, and after fighting from 8 A. M. till 12 M., our troops had gained the object sought—an open space up to the woods in which the rebel line was formed. In this engagement Gen. ROBINSON was severely wounded in the leg, and will have to lose his limb.

At 6 P. M., two fresh divisions, namely, those of CRAWFORD, (Fifth Corps,) and GETTY, (Sixth Corps,) were thrown in, and after a severe engagement lasting for an hour and a half, CRAWFORD carried the rebel position, took their first line of breastworks and captured over a hundred prisoners. This ended the action of yesterday. For the numbers engaged our losses were extremely severe, and will count up to 4,000.

This morning found our line established the

and a half miles this side of Spottsylvania Court-house, and securely intrenched. LONGSTREET has also been strengthened by the arrival of EWELL'S corps. The rebel line lies on a ridge a mile in front of the Court-house, and it will be a position somewhat difficult to carry, should it be decided to make a direct attack.

It will be observed on the map that our present position carries us many miles south and in the rear of Fredericksburgh, whose famous fortified heights are in our possession without the need of firing a shot. It will be used as a depot and for hospitals, and several thousand of our wounded were, yesterday, sent there. A small army of 2,500 greybacks have also just been marched by headquarters en route to the same point. They are generally hearty-looking fellows, and rather better clad and shod than I have before seen them.

Everything thus far has gone on satisfactorily, although it would doubtless have been better had we been able to find an opportunity of fighting a decisive battle.

The Army of the Potomac is in superb condition and spirits—in fact, was never before in any such condition. We are going on to Richmond, depend upon it; at least, some more formidable obstacle than has yet appeared will have to present itself to stop us. BUTLER, we see by the Richmond papers of yesterday, is between Petersburgh and Richmond; SIGEL and AVERELL are in the right place, and you will presently hear from the cavalry corps of this army, under the bold and energetic leadership of SHERIDAN, in a way that will throw all previous raids into the shade.

The headquarters of the Lieutenant-General and Gen. MEADE are always established near each other, and in action the two Generals and their staffs are always together. Gen. MEADE retains the immediate command of this army, while Gen. GRANT exercises a general supervision over the movements over the whole field. In regard to the operations of this army, the two Generals are in constant consultation, and it would, I think, be hard to say how much his own practical share in the actual command is. Perhaps I may say that Gen. GRANT indicates the strategic moves and combinations, while Gen. MEADE takes charge of their technical execution.

The rebel papers acknowledge a loss of two general officers killed and two mortally wounded, while it is now positively ascertained that LONGSTREET also is wounded.

P. S.—We have this moment been shocked by the announcement that Gen. SEDGWICK, Commander of the Sixth Army Corps, has just been killed by a shot through the head. He was standing up with his staff in his advanced line of breastworks, and was picked off by a rebel sharpshooter, perched in a tree. The ball entered the face a little below the eye, and came out at the back of his neck. He lived for half an hour after being struck, and then expired. His body has just passed headquarters in an ambulance. It will be embalmed and sent North. The profoundest grief is felt at the death of the lion-hearted chieftain, and it is felt that we could better afford to lose a whole division of the army than one whose valor, illustrated on so many fields, we can ill spare at this time. He never fought so well as in the arduous three days' fight in the "Wilderness," and it was a matter of general remark how splendidly SEDGWICK had been doing. It is presumed that Gen. WRIGHT will take the vacant command of the Sixth Corps.

SKIRMISHES OF MONDAY, MAY 9.

(In order to make our account continuous from day to day, we insert again a part of a letter given yesterday.)

IN FRONT OF SPOTTSYLVANIA COURT-HOUSE, VA., TUESDAY, MAY 10, 1864.

The military situation at this hour (Tuesday, 12 M.) finds the line of the army drawn around Spottsylvania Court-house in the arc of a circle, the concave toward us. The enemy is in force at that point, and seems determined to dispute the passage. I mentioned in my letter of yesterday that the two armies ran a race from the Wilderness for Spottsylvania, but unfortunately the enemy won the race. This should not be interpreted as conveying any censure on the Army of the Potomac, which has marched with new inspiration and a rapidity never before seen in its history. But the very necessities of our condition as the invading party, with our old base abandoned and a new one not yet opened, obliges us to take immense trains, which, of course, retard the general movement of the army; the rebels constantly falling back on their base, and defended by their own partisans, can equally take it at any moment their. It would certainly have been of great advantage to us, although it would have been a great misfortune to the country, if we could have reached Spottsylvania Court-house in advance of the enemy. An inspection of the map will show you that it is an important strategic point, being the point of divergence of the roads leading southward, both to the right and left. The enemy's occupancy of it enables him to cover the withdrawal of his trains and at the same time bars our further advance, unless on the condition of an assault—which, in the country in which we are now fighting, is very destructive of life—or of a turning movement. It is probable that to-day will decide the question; and if, as we hope, it gives us Spottsylvania Court-house, we shall then be out of the Wilderness, and have a clear road on to Richmond.

Yesterday was intended to be a day of quietude, during which the army, fatigued by five days incessant marching and fighting, would have an opportunity to recuperate and renew the supplies of rations. Little occurred to interfere with this programme, although the rebels made an attack on WILCOX'S Division of BURNSIDE'S Corps, early in the afternoon. They were, however, handsomely repulsed, and BURNSIDE has the extreme left of our line, within a mile and a half of the Court-house.

About 6 o'clock last evening, Gen. HANCOCK, holding the right of our line, crossed Po Creek and seized the Block House Road, the direct line from Parker's Store to Spottsylvania Court-house. Immediately afterward, WARREN, who now was centre, advanced his line of battle, drove the rebels for half a mile, and took up a strong position. Up to the present hour, the situation remains as here described.

The rebels have as yet shown no disposition to assume the offensive at this point. It was confidently expected on Sunday night that an attack would take place on HANCOCK'S front, toward the Catharpen Road, and on a line with the Brock Road. The troops showed great diligence in throwing up breastworks, and a brigade was advanced out for a mile or more from the main front over some cleared land. About an hour before sunset this attack was made. Immediately upon the retirement of the advance brigade, the enemy charged toward our line, but never reached it. They put a few guns in position, and shelled the woods for a while, but did no harm. A small number of Gen. BURNETT'S troops, on whom the attack was principally made, were wounded by the enemy's musketry before they withdrew, having received more harm than they had done. Before this attack, our advance could see HILL'S Corps marching south to join the main body, opposing our progress in front on the branch of the Po. As it was necessary to hold this position until it was certain the enemy were gone, Gen. HANCOCK did not stay the progress of the men engaged in forming breastworks, but added another line in the open ground around Todd's Tavern, a regiment of heavy artillery working all night to finish them. It was a very pretty sight. The lanterns of the workmen hung to the blossoming cherry-trees, and picturesque groups of soldiers digging and erecting the works, while hatchets stood harnessed up, their commanders lying on the ground around the carriages, in wait for any emergency. At earlier hours advanced and found the enemy in small force; and about noonday Gen. HANCOCK left Gen. WARD'S brigade to hold the position, and advanced with his corps toward the River Po, which by night he had, after considerable resistance, passed. Gen. BURNSIDE pushing out on the extreme left, advanced to a place in front of SEDGWICK'S (now WRIGHT'S) corps. A reconnoissance by two regiments was made. These advanced some distance without meeting much resistance. At the same time the cannonade along some portions of the front was quite brisk between ours and the rebel artillery.

The prisoners we have are in apparent good condition. One fellow, who was taken with much trouble, explained his determined efforts to avoid capture, on the ground that it was currently reported that we should massacre all our prisoners, in revenge for the slaughter of our negro soldiers.

We have fewer stragglers than usual, though not so few as might be. It is not easy to straggle in a country where there is no communication, and guerrillas loaf around the army to pick up any waif or estray straying in the woods. The Provost-guard has all it can do, to keep the laggards up to their duty.

Gen. PAYSON had quite a brigade of them one day, and I believe had serious thoughts of making a charge with them.

The same intolerable heat which we have had every since this movement commenced still continues, and numerous cases of coup de soleil happen every day. It is, however, cool compared to the heat that it bears the troops in vigorous travelling condition, marching and countermarching in dust, which is here of a most malignant type.

Gen. WRIGHT, who formerly commanded a division of the Sixth, is now in command of that Corps, so grievously deprived of its head by the death of the beloved SEDGWICK, the details of which I yesterday sent you. The grief at this sad stroke has manifested itself in various forms throughout the army. An effort was at first made to keep the sad fact from the knowledge of his men. Gen. WRIGHT is an excellent soldier, and will command the Sixth well.

The road which our troops found were from Orange Court-house to Fredericksburgh, but it is forty-one miles long. It crosses no river. Proceeding from Orange Court-house, we come to a distance of ten miles to Verdiersville; ten miles further brings us to Parker's Store, six miles further to Wilderness, five miles further to Chancellorsville; ten miles more to Fredericksburgh.

Just as I close this letter a heavy cannonading has commenced, in the front, for which I leave immediately.

THE BATTLE OF TUESDAY, MAY 10.

WILDERNESS, TUESDAY, MAY 10.

The following dispatch has just come to hand:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, NEAR SPOTTSYLVANIA C. H., WEDNESDAY, MAY 11.

My dispatch dated 6 P. M. yesterday gave an outline sketch of the operations of that day down to the hour named, and included the announcement of the turning of our right flank. [This dispatch has not yet come to hand—Ed. Times.] I would gladly have avoided marring the situation suspended in this position by action, but the messenger by whom I hoped an opportunity to send my dispatch left just as the orders bearing the things outlined. I begin to add that the marching troops were equally impeded, and that the army held its present position with difficulty during most of the night, nothing more than was needed for the past two days, with the exception that our right is somewhat more strengthened.

Yesterday's operations now assumed the character of the most bitter and perhaps the most bloody of the series of battles which have been fought since we crossed the Rapidan. Knowing, as we do, that our enemy, from his interfering having drawn in Lee's communications, that his supplies are almost exhausted, that the lines of investment are being drawn around Richmond, and that echoes of disaster reach us from afar off, Tennessee, and presage the downfall of the fabric of the rebellion, we are left to infer that the attack of yesterday was an desperate one, but we have hope and attempt to believe that other successes by dealing a crushing blow at this army, it is enough to say that it failed, and though we inflicted a severe loss of life upon us, he suffered not less himself, and we still hold a position against which the rebel fury may dash itself in vain. It would seem, so he has been the policy of Lee in the earlier battles which he has delivered during the past week, to concentrate the advance to Richmond at every available point, to wear us away by degrees, and then, perhaps, to fall upon the Union forces under Butler, and crush or annihilate them. This plan he has carried into execution, with a masterly skill, inspired by a fury perfectly diabolical.

We are steadily pressing the rebels southward. The enemy have been greatly forced by the nature of this country, in whose dense woods and tangled chaparral the lines and wary are much more at home. Fortunately, if we place ourselves position which they now hold in front of Spottsylvania Court-house, we shall be out of the "Wilderness" and reach open country.

The operations of yesterday were opened by a reconnoissance on our left by BURNSIDE'S corps, which developed the fact that the enemy held in our front there, skirmishing and cavalry disputing the advance. This caused the division of MEADE to withdraw from its position on the extreme right and it was sent to the left to connect with BURNSIDE. The battle position now very much resembled that of Gettysburgh, a curved interior line, well protected by breastworks, with the additional defense of a marshy run in front. Holding as we may by the sense, they discovered the weakness of the right, now held by BARTLETT'S division. This division of HANCOCK'S command and yesterday, had made the passage of the Po, throwing out skirmishers on the east bank. This gave it a column of vantage, from which it not only enfiladed the entire rebel position, but commanded the road on which their trains were passing. At the same time, however, it declined to form the rest of the army—a false position, of which the rebels could hardly have failed to take advantage, and of which they did take advantage, as we shall presently see.

Gen. WARREN'S corps held the centre of the line. It was resolved that a vigorous assault should be made there, while HANCOCK and BURNSIDE endeavored to assail and turn the two flanks of the enemy. With this view, two divisions of the Second Corps were thrown over to connect with the right of WARREN and support him. In execution of the projected design, WARREN'S corps moved forward during the day, pressing the rebels through the woods to an open space behind, close to the enemy's breastworks. This was attended by very heavy shelling from the enemy, and it was three or four o'clock P. M. before the woods were cleared. After this, the corps advanced to assault the breastworks. In this, however, it did not succeed, although the attempt was gallantly made. CARROLL'S brigade went in on the charge and lost eight hundred men.

Gen. MEADE realizing the critical position in which the extreme right of our line (HANCOCK'S division,) was placed, had ordered it to draw back. The rebels had, however, followed us, and making a desperate assault on our right, making it a matter of considerable difficulty to withdraw; supports coming up, however, it was successfully accomplished. A general attack was ordered along the line, to take place at 5 o'clock, but owing to the tardiness of some of the Commanders to get into line it was postponed, first to 6 o'clock, and then to half past. A furious cannonade from our artillery preceded the charge. The worst of it was that the interior of the horse was wanted its being perfectly successful.

Gen. WRIGHT advanced the flower of the Sixth Corps. Nobly and well they sustained their reputation. Upton's brigade leading, they succeeded rapidly upon the enemy's breastworks without PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

In the House of Commons, on the 28th ult., Sir WILLIAM GULL, in the absence of Lord PALMERSTON, said, in reply to an inquiry by Mr. HORSMAN, that the Government had no intention whatever of proposing any measure on Jamaican affairs, as it was understood the British Government was quite satisfied the American Government would not consent.

Mr. FRAZER called attention to the case of the Tuscaloosa, and criticized the action of the Government in her case. He charged the Government with adopting the views of the Federal agents, and moved a resolution that the instructions contained in the Duke of Newcastle's dispatch of the 4th of November, 1862, to the Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, which consider still unexplained, are at variance with the principles of international law.

General PEEL said:

The Duke of Newcastle denied that the Tuscaloosa had a right to be treated as a commissioned vessel, and admitted that the Government was bound to restore her as an unadjudicated prize. If they did not take this course, the Confederates would be able to make all their prisoners British parts in defiance of the Queen's proclamation. He admitted that the instructions to the Governor were not as explicit as they should be, and it was intended to send out rather instructions which would be thoroughly considered.

The Attorney-General also made an elaborate speech in defense of the Government. He insisted that the instructions to the Governor of the Cape were entirely in accordance with international law, although their tendency might seem to maintain the dignity and neutrality of the country. In the case of the Tuscaloosa, she had been released through a misconception of instructions, the only proper and fair course was to release her.

Speeches were made on the opposite side by Mr. WYNNE, Mr. ELLIS-MORRIS, Sir H. CAIRNS and others, who charged the Government with favoring the Federals at the expense of the Confederates.

During the debate the House was very thin and a motion was made to "count out," but a considerable number of members came in and made up the requisite quorum.

Finally the House divided with the following result: For the resolution, 186; against it, 219.

The Government majority of 33 was received with loud cheers.

The London Morning Herald charges the Government with having planned a "count out." They failed, but the absence of many of the Opposition members saved them, in a division, the censure they deserve.

In the House of Lords on the 28th, Earl DERBY called attention to the great length of the published correspondence between the Government and Mason, Slidell, relative to the seizure of the guns built in the Britain. He insinuated that the Government had not used every effort to secure the release of the vessel, and that the Law Officers had not given the Government such a report as they ought to have given. He contended that the release of the guns was a violation of international law, and that the Government had not acted with the dignity and firmness which should characterize the action of a great nation. He concluded by moving an address to the Queen, praying her Majesty to lay before the House the correspondence between the Government and the Law Officers of the Crown, relative to the seizure of the guns built in the Britain.

Earl RUSSELL said that the Government had not been in any way responsible for the release of the Britain. The Law Officers had given the Government a report which was in accordance with the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown in the case of the Tuscaloosa. The JUDGMENTS AGAINST THE CITY.

Resolutions of the Board of Commissioners of Health Prohibiting Bone-Boiling in the City.

The following message was received yesterday from the Mayor by the Board of Councilmen:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 6, 1864.

To the Honorable the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN: I have approved, to-day, the ordinance making the annual appropriations for the year 1864, which I received on the 6th inst. In doing so, I was induced by a sense of justice to the numerous persons who have claims against the City, that they might not suffer by any delay, and that the operations of the municipal government should not be embarrassed.

Previous to that year, the Common Council had annually presented for the consideration of the Legislature an estimate of the amount required for the administration of the City government, apportioned among the various branches of expenditure. This year there was no agreement between the two boards; the Aldermen insisted on one tax project, the Councilmen on another, and the Comptroller, after having submitted his budget of taxation to the Common Council, stated that if the Legislature did not decide, he would be unable to raise the money. The Legislature was perplexed at this deplorable want of unanimity among the representatives of the City. The Corporation could hardly be recognized in this disagreeable form, and the Legislature was left in a dilemma either to do nothing or strive to patch over the financial chaos something that might answer the purpose of keeping the machine of government in motion. It is to be regretted that greater harmony does not exist in the City councils in place of deserving the reproach which is on the Legislature.

In view of the action of the Common Council, permit me to say, that, in my judgment, certain municipal improvements and benefits have therein been unprovided for. I regard the appropriations contemplated in the TAX LEVY for the "Blind Mechanics' Association," and the creation of an "Asylum for Lunatics," as commending themselves to general sympathy and approbation. Money expended in alleviating suffering, or assisting the unfortunate, is never regarded as a burden by the citizens of New-York. They have always viewed such institutions with an enlarged and wise liberality, and I appeal with confidence to the Common Council to pass an ordinance authorizing entering these items in other ordinances.

While it is the duty of the Corporation to watch over the application of these charitable endowments and discriminate carefully as to the just amount allowed, one is worth much more to the citizens of the Metropolis than the other. If there was any reason to doubt the partiality of the Legislature, the fund which should be distributed equally and alike in all.

I would also call your attention to the item of appropriation for "Judgments," amounting to $174,000, and for which only a nominal sum is embraced in the ordinance. I understand that there is a considerable amount of claims against the City of this class, making them one of nearly $70,000, in which a decision has been recently rendered in the court of final resort, after a protracted litigation. The law officers of the Corporation will undoubtedly advise us of the exact amount of these claims, and funds should be provided for their liquidation, as otherwise the credit of the City will be impaired, and serious loss and embarrassment needlessly incurred.

The items which provide for arrearages in any department should, in my opinion, have been passed, if for no other reason, to avoid the expense of the City, a fruitful cause of increased taxation; especially, as there is reason to believe that the practice of procuring claims to be used in systematically solicited by unscrupulous men, as a means of carrying out their designed public plunder.

With reference to the appropriations for roads in the upper part of the Island, I have no objection to a just-like distribution, but would recommend that the amount be specifically set apart to keep them in some reasonably good state of repair as to accommodate the travel.

The burden of taxation, the responsibility of which is now sought to be avoided by the various public bodies and officers intrusted with the duty of authorizing and levying it, has gradually assumed its present alarming proportions. The evil has arisen mainly from the scarcely complicated system of our City and County local Government. The action of former Legislatures and Common Councils, for many years past, has contributed to this result, and the extravagance it has engendered. While a careful scrutiny of the various items of expenditure will effect much in the way of securing an economical administration, a reform in the municipal government is necessary to make it thorough and complete. I condemn the policy which has led to this enormous and expensive government; but at the same time, earnestly desire to begin the work now of retrenchment and frugality. The members of your honorable body express the same desire, and if the people are convinced of the sincerity of these professions, an enlargement of the powers once vested in the representatives of the City may be reasonably expected.

It would be a fruitless task at this time to review the situation of the appropriations which have been passed. I felt it my duty, for the reasons above mentioned, to affix my signature to the ordinance as it passed the Common Council. I desire, however, sincerely to make known the obligation I feel of obedience to the law. The Constitution of the State confers on the Legislature authority to restrict the powers of all municipal bodies in the matter of taxation and contracting debts. While I admit to the fullest extent the competency of the Common Council to diminish the appropriations authorized by the Legislature, or to refuse to raise any that may in its judgment be improper, I also claim that all the restrictions, conditions and limitations, affixed by the Legislature to the disposition of the funds raised, are binding on the Corporation, and that, when it is the highest duty of the citizen to obey, attach to and follow those funds.

These restrictions may be unexpected, but it is obligatory on the successors of the public money to carry out faithfully, if not cheerfully, the requirements of law. A disregard of constitutional authority may lurk in the minds of legislators, judges and the highest magistrates, but whenever found, and however plausibly disguised, it is the essential spirit of rebellion. No personal feeling, and no political bias can justly sway the appeals for the enforcement of the Constitution. They are mandatory and should be obeyed, but the patient and conscientious discharge of their duties in the mode pointed out by law will continually lead to the restoration of the chartered rights of the City to her proper authorities and representatives.

I would recommend to your honorable body to revise the ordinance of each branch to the end that the Legislature, as you may deem proper, may enact the proper administration of the City finances, especially as to the transference of funds from one head of account to another is prohibited. And I would also suggest the propriety of amending the ordinance so as to recognize the restrictions attached by the Legislature to all these appropriations as are of a conditional character. C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Mayor.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, May 12, 1864.

To the Honorable the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN: I transmit herewith a copy of resolutions which was adopted by the Board of Commissioners of Health, yesterday, respecting an ordinance to your honorable body, the amendment of the ordinance prohibiting bone boiling, so as to include the melting of fat in the provisions thereof, and submitting the draft of such amended ordinance. This amendment is in accordance with the recommendations contained in a communication dated 4th inst., on this subject, from the City Inspector to the Common Council. C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Mayor.

[COPY.]

Resolved, That the Common Council be respectfully requested to amend the ordinance relative to bone boiling, so as to include fat melting in the provisions thereof, and that the accompanying draft of such ordinance be submitted.

TROTTING ON THE FASHION COURSE YESTERDAY —A CRIPPLE TROT.

A match of some interest to the owners of the two horses engaged and the friends of either party, came off at the "Fashion" yesterday. It was somewhat unfortunate that this match was let down on the same day as a previously announced trot at the "Union," hence the attendance was not more latest than numerous. The gelding Discount, one of the contestants, had been previously well-known in trotting circles under the sobriquet of Andy Mulligan, and had done his two miles in 5:32; whilst his opponent, Morgan Jones, who had been unnamed until the day previously, was comparatively a green horse.

We may as well state that this match, which was made up in a hurry, was between two cripples, for Discount was stiff and lame all over until he was warmed up—but showed his old gameness and bottom—whilst Morgan Jones had but three legs and a swinger—he of that one being diseased, sore and swollen. Nevertheless, he had a game heart, which carried him through his shaking, despite his crippled state and the heavy handicapping of the leg in question.

First Heat.—After two attempts at scoring, they getting away very unsteady—Bonnie leading to the turn, and round it to the first quarter, where Morgan Jones lapped him. Down the back stretch, Discount opened a wide gap, which he gradually increased in the three-quarter pole, maintaining it round the home stretch (here and passing the score in the first mile full six lengths in advance. (Odds of $100 to $40 on Discount.) Taking this opportunity to second time, Discount opened a gap, which Jones was not able to close throughout the back stretch; but getting into a good square trot at the three-quarters, he came home the easiest of winners in 3:44, and could have readily distanced his opponent.

Second Heat.—There was no betting, but plenty of talk and offers, without any real business being transacted. Discount, at the word, went off with the lead, increasing it round the turn, and down the back stretch—no change took place at the half or three-quarters—and making the home stretch on the first mile, his lead was so clear and decided that he trot well—literally easy as they passed the score. Morgan Jones was blowing heavily at the quarter pole—the second time his driver pulled up—and left Discount to trot round the balance of the heat at his leisure.

TROTTING AT THE UNION COURSE YESTERDAY.

The advertised sweepstakes of $300, mile and repeat, in harness, with three entries—all of them from Jersey—attracted some attention among the trotting men of Long Island, and the result was that a considerable sprinkling of the cognoscenti were present. The original entry comprised the gelding Blue Morgan, the sorrel mare Stella, and the gelding John R. Moore—but the latter being drawn it was reduced to a match. There was little betting, and that was all in favor of Blue Morgan, on whom 3 to 1 was freely laid.

First Heat.—A good send-off was effected, but Morgan broke almost immediately, giving Stella a lead in the first quarter of nigh on twenty lengths, which she increased some ten or twelve at the half mile. Morgan now took to running, and took Stella off her feet, but she got down again. Morgan continued running, and passed the score first, but the heat was properly given to Stella, in 3:09.

Second Heat.—A good even start, but Stella broke up immediately after getting the word, and Morgan taking the lead, kept it all the way round—winning easily, by some half dozen lengths, in 2:53—Stella running all the way home.

Third Heat.—After three attempts a send off was achieved, but Stella broke as before, and when at the three-quarter pole, and on the home stretch, leaving Morgan to come home a ready winner in 2:53.

First Heat—Stella won easily in 3:06—Morgan breaking badly.

The second and third heats were closely contested, BEVENS winning cleverly in 2:54½ each.

The Remains of Gen. Sedgwick.

The remains of the brave and lamented SEDGWICK, which lay in state yesterday at the City Hall, were visited by a great number of citizens, who delighted to pay a last tribute of respect to one, whose death, though so untimely, was the fitting close of an heroic life. He was dressed in his uniform, just as he fell when struck by that fatal bullet. His coffin was draped with the national flag, and was appropriately decorated with wreaths and bouquets, in which were entwined forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley. The martial face of the departed hero, bronzed by exposure to the fierce blaze of battle, were in death a calm and serene aspect, marred only by the wound in the left cheek—nay, not marred, for that sad token of his stern and high fidelity unto death to the cause of his country and of liberty, was a nobler decoration than was ever the star or cross bestowed by royalty for success in war. The remains will be taken this morning to Cornwall, Conn., whence they will be consigned to their last resting place.

How deep the brave, who live to fall
For all their country's wishes blest,
To us man who has fallen in this war could these beautiful lines of COLLINS be more truthfully applied than to Gen. SEDGWICK.

The Sons of Connecticut in New-York held a meeting yesterday afternoon, at which Gov. BUCKINGHAM, of Connecticut, and two of Gen. SEDGWICK'S staff were present, when the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That while we mourn the sacrifice of every gallant life given in battle to preserve the life of the nation, and sympathize with the bereaved friends of every Union soldier, we cannot but feel with more intensity the fearful cost of victory when death strikes at those who are the pride and hope of the nation.

Resolved, That in the death of Major-Gen. JOHN SEDGWICK, who was killed at the head of his corps in battle in the State of Virginia, the country has sustained the loss of a brave and gallant soldier, a daring and skillful leader, and a patriot worthy to have died in so sacred a cause; that the State which gave him birth has been honored by the noblest service he has rendered his country; by the example he has left; by the sacrifice of life, which he so freely gave; and while Connecticut mourns the loss, she calls upon her sons to fill his place and follow his example.

Resolved, That a committee of the sons of Connecticut be appointed to make, in connection with the military friends of Gen. SEDGWICK, the necessary and proper arrangements for the funeral here and in Connecticut; and the following were appointed: Judge COWLES, Waldo HUTCHINS, Joseph RIPLEY, Col. J. H. AIVY, Charles GOULD, R. H. McCURDY, F. M. WETMORE.

Adjourned.

R. H. McCURDY, Chairman.
F. M. WETMORE, Vice-Chairman.
CHARLES GOULD, Secretary.

Chamber of Commerce.

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday to consider the report of a committee on the subject of memorializing Congress for relief in the cases of those merchants who had been compelled to pay the 30 per cent extra duty on goods entered on the date of the passage of the joint resolution of Congress.

A debate ensued. Mr. BIGELOW opposed the adoption of the memorial for several reasons, explained at length. He was followed by Mr. OSBORN, who supported the same view of the question, and offered additional reasons; and by Capt. MARSHALL and Mr. COWLING.

Mr. LOW, the President, then left the Chair to advocate the adoption of the memorial, and was replied to by Mr. OSBORN, Capt. MARSHALL and Mr. BIGELOW.

The Chairman announced that the Secretary of the Treasury had been urgently affected, so in that department, it was sent back to the committee with instructions to change its phraseology and tenor.

Anniversary of the American Anti-Slavery Society.

TUESDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

At the Church of the Puritans, Tuesday morning, this Society celebrated its Thirty-first Anniversary. Wm. LLOYD GARRISON presided. After the opening ceremonies a series of resolutions were offered which were in substance, as follows: That the society recognizes in the rebellion the hand of God as a merited chastisement for our great national sin of Chattel Slavery; that Liberty and Slavery must be in perpetual conflict, and that any Government attempting to unite them, must be overthrown; that the measures before Congress for the extinction of Slavery in those portions of the country exempt from the President's Proclamation of Jan. 1, 1863, are wise and patriotic; that honor is due to the Women's Loyal League for their energy in circulating petitions asking Congress to adopt measures for the immediate extinction of Slavery; that it is essential the Constitution shall expressly prohibit Slavery and that the action of the Senate, adopting an amendment to that effect, should be sanctioned by the House of Representatives; that the several accusations ever brought against Slavery, as a system, by the Abolitionists, have been fully sustained by the atrocities at Fort Pillow, Fort Hudson, Fort Wagner and other places; that the Government is bound to give protection to all fighting under its flag; that the decision of Attorney-General BATES, that no decision can be made between those who are fighting for their country, and that the same compensation is to be meted out without regard to race or complexion, is unjust and obligatory.

WEDNESDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The closing meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society, Wednesday evening, at Cooper Institute, was very largely attended—fully one-half the audience being ladies.

Mr. JAMES G. CLARKE opened the proceedings by singing "The People's Anthem."

The President, (Wm. LLOYD GARRISON,) before introducing the first speaker, read the following resolution, which was passed by acclamation:

Resolved, That this meeting would respond in grateful acclamation at the evidences which have been furnished, from time to time, of the extensive and deep sympathy felt by the majority of the people of Great Britain with the people of America in their struggle with the enemies of freedom and free institutions, and especially that we deeply regret that the clergy of Scotland, since the timely and eloquent utterances of such representatives of popular sentiment as George Thompson, John Bright, William Edward Forster, Fredk. Chapman and Newman Hall, Revs. Baptist Noel and Newman Hall, Revs. Baldwin, Smith and Richard, Wheldon, Morley, Guinness, Vincent, Wilson, and also in the strengthening testimonies of such journals as the London Morning Star, the Daily News, the Leeds Mercury, the Manchester Examiner and Times, and the Caledonia Mercury.

SPEECH OF HON. GEORGE THOMPSON.

Mr. THOMPSON, who was introduced as the "True friend of our country, of free institutions, and of universal liberty," was received with warm applause. He began by some remarks illustrative of the state of popular sentiment on the other side of the Atlantic. The community is very distinctly divided in sympathy and in feeling upon the American question,—or "Secession versus Union." Families, districts, journals and magazines are divided into North and South. First among the journals that, at the very outset of the struggle, took part against the Union was the London Times, (Hisses.) Perhaps the best written paper, it is among particular classes, the most influential. Yet no one better than the writers of the TIMES have better understood the plans and objects of the traitors with whom we have been called upon to contend. When South Carolina, on the 20th of December, 1860, seceded from the Union, and for some time afterward, the TIMES newspaper took an enlightened, and just, and generous view of the controversy. It represented our enemies as "wickedly attempting to rend the mightiest confederation the world has ever seen." It represented that their object was "to repress free discussion by the tar barrel and pine faggot, and found an empire based upon Slavery, upon the revival of the infernal African Slave-trade, and the degradation of the human race, whether performed by the white or black man." But as soon as it saw the possibility of the South accomplishing its execrable ends, then it became the advocate of the views and principles of that party which it has from the beginning of its career always supported; that is, the party composed of the aristocracy, the landocracy and moneycracy of Great Britain. The TIMES has never been the representative of the liberal, progressive and reforming masses of British society. On the contrary, it has invariably resisted, ridiculed and rendered every reform movement, and every distinguished reformer from the issue of its first number. Until Government took pains to interfere with the Anglo-Confederate pirates, it was the champion of the flagitious brokers of the neutrality law, LAIRD and LINDSAY, but it got its cue from headquarters and its tone was turned; and the day is coming when the same paper will repudiate its allies, the slave-monkers of Richmond, and will affect to rejoice over the reinstatement of the hightiest confederacy the world has ever seen. Let your cause be but as righteous as it is just, and that paper which has written the blackest of national extremity can sing a song, will praise you in the hour of your national triumph. (Cheers.) He alluded to BEAUMARIS, in his dotage, to HORSUCK, the apologist for Austria, the lick-spittle of NAPOLEON, the accomplice of VALLANDIGHAM and of WOOD, (twin brothers—pity they should be parted—lamentable,) and the handful of aristocrats who sympathized with the Southern Confederacy, who represented no one but themselves, and hoped, that the voice would be raised that sought, for the sake of these, to sever the band of friendship between us and the self-denying operatives and middle-classes of England, who, through their great cause of suffering for the scarcity of cotton, have never sent in a petition for the raising of the blockade, who had spoiled the machinations of PALMERSTON, who had upset the hopes of the Confederacy, who had spiked the guns of the adversary, and had preserved harmony between England and America. (Applause.) Everything now looked hopeful. We had a President pledged—staged in pledges—to the recognition of that corner-stone of the Republic, "all men are free and equal," and who had lately said "if Slavery be not wrong, then nothing is wrong. If Slavery is wrong, then the antithesis is right." Public opinion would soon be able to pay off the debt which had accumulated; that debt which, if duplicated fifty times, would have been well spent in the overthrow of oppression. Let Copperheads rail against greenbacks to their hearts content—the Rebellion is about to shower down blood, chastisement and death. Mr. THOMPSON concluded by a warm eulogium on WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, which received a hearty response.

SPEECH OF WENDELL PHILLIPS.

After "The Field of Gettysburgh," sung by Mr. CLARKE, Hon. WENDELL PHILLIPS was loudly called for and enthusiastically welcomed. He one, he said, could tell to see how much we had gained; how in a single year God had done as much as is usually requires a quarter of a century to accomplish. The teachings of this great national struggle then so fast upon us, tend to show us more clearly—that we our every forgetting of the elements of our gain. To-day the largest army raised in this half century does battle in the name of the nation for that slave whom for twenty years we have almost in vain begged the nation to remember. Virginia is drenched in blood from year to year, in the determination and resolute purpose of the Northern people to carry their salvation down to the Gulf, and lift the negro into the equal level of political and civil existence. The President of the United States has his name dating to-day in the blessings of Europe and of Christendom—not because of his office, but because he has done what this society, for a quarter of a century, has entreated the civilized nations of the world to believe him to be an Abolitionist. (Cheers.) Let us not forget at such a moment as this the terrible cost at which these advantages have been gained. Yesterday your gallant son, who left this State, where he dwelt in the bosom of family joy, beckoned on by every ambitious hope to go down, almost as a private at first, and place himself at the side of the negro, the blood of the noble Wadsworth has flowed towards the cause (enthusiastic applause;) and to-day that stout old soldier, SEDGWICK, fell in the van of that battle which is fighting over the prostrate body of the negro. (Renewed applause.)

Mr. PHILLIPS continued to delight his audience to a late hour, when the meeting adjourned.

Arrival of a Valuable Prize.

The prize steamship Minnie, Acting Ensign FRANCIS WALLACE, commanding, arrived at this port last night from off Wilmington, having been captured on the 8th inst. in lat. 34, lon. 75, by the United States steam gunboat Connecticut while attempting to run the blockade. She left Wilmington the night previous, and has a cargo of 600 bales cotton, 20 tons tobacco and 12 barrels turpentine, destined for Bermuda. She was built in Glasgow in November, 1863, for a blockade-runner. She registers 450 tons, and was owned by the Albion Trading Company of London. The following is a list of the prize officers in charge: Acting Ensign, FRANCIS WALLACE, commanding; Acting Master's Mate, E. F. Blague; Acting Third Assistant Engineers, (in charge,) Wm. McGrath, Chas. B. Lawrence.

Avoid a Draft.

Only about twelve hundred men are now needed to fill the quota of this City. Supervisor BURR is daily hard at work at the Park Recruiting Barracks paying the bounties to recruits, which are as follows: For army recruits, $300; for marines, $300; for naval recruits for three years, $300; for naval recruits for two years, $200; for naval recruits for one year, $100. A premium of $20 is also given to each man bringing a recruit.

Union Communion.

A meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the Cooper Institute with a view to the advancement of the cause of the American and Christian Union. Rev. Dr. E. N. KIRK, of Boston, presided. The following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, A large proportion of the population of the Slave States, by the systems of those States, have been prevented from possessing an interest in the land, property of this country, and have also been deprived of the advantages of education and a Christian civilization; and

Resolved, That it becomes the benevolence of the Free States deeply to commiserate their condition. And

Whereas, The ignorance and degradation of that portion of the people which has been willing and misguided instruments of the demagogues who projected the rebellion that has threatened our national existence; therefore

Resolved, That we regard the removal of that ignorance and degradation as indispensable to the future peace of our country. And

Whereas, The ignorance of the dominant class in those States which has entirely prevented the introduction of the energy and influence of Christian civilization among their degraded neighbors, heretofore preventing any further attempt at improvement, therefore

Resolved, That we deem it the duty of the citizens of the Free States, in connection with the intelligent and loyal men of the Slave States, to prepare a system of moral missionary operations which may follow the advance of our victorious armies.

Two other resolutions, relative to Committees were also adopted. Remarks were made by Hon. Ben THAYER, Rev. Mr. LOCKWOOD, and others, after which the meeting adjourned.

Schools for Southern Whites.

A letter on the educational wants of the white population of the South, from Rev. HOSEA BIRGE, Chaplain and Superintendent of Negro Affairs, Newbern, N. C., to a gentleman in this City:

NEWBERN, N. C., May 2, 1864.

MY DEAR BROTHER: I am in receipt of your letter of March 4, which speaks of the movements you are inaugurating for the instruction of the white population of the South. I am glad you have undertaken to attend to this business. Our efforts to furnish schools for the colored people have already reacted powerfully upon the poor whites of the South, and they are beginning to clamor for the instruction which they perceive given freely to others. I have noticed in every one of the towns and cities in our department, held in military possession, the rising of this feeling among the white population. In answer to it I have already established schools for them in Washington and in Beaufort, and have intended to do so in all the other places we hold. Within a few days the Commanding-General of this Department, J. J. PECK, has issued an order establishing schools for whites in Newbern, and appointing a commission of gentlemen here to superintend them. One has already been opened, and a lady placed in charge of it who has resided some years in the city. I was last week at Slatterns Inlet. I think four or five teachers might well be located there, and the people are all ready to receive them cordially and gratefully. I hope your association will be formed, and the work prosecuted with energy. I have long been convinced that this rebellion, which is causing us so much trouble, is founded in ignorance, both among the whites and the blacks, and that he who shall do the most to dissipate this ignorance with intelligence will be doing the most to prevent any future outbreak of the same sort. In opening schools for the South, we are laying the foundations of a new order of society."

Similar appeals come from the department of Gen. BUTLER, especially in regard to Norfolk and Portsmouth, and from the department of Gen. BANKS, at New-Orleans. And this want it is one design of the Union Commission to supply. That Commission is to organize the work on a Christian basis. There, say, the 15th inst., at 8 P. M. And we trust it will have the generous co-operation of the friends of our country and kind in accomplishing the desirable results it has in view.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

RELIEF OF THE SUFFERING AND UNFORTUNATE.—The New-York Society for the relief of the respected and crippled, held their first annual meeting, in the Bible-House, Tuesday evening. May 10, when Mr. E. M. HARTLEY, Corresponding Secretary, read a very able report, being a review of their labors for the year; and was followed by Dr. JAMES KENNEDY, the physician and surgeon of the institution, who read a very full report of the great and good work that has been done for the indigent, maimed and crippled. There has been treated in the Institution during the year, 828 patients, 4½ per cent being under 12 years old. Many of them being paralytic, and unable to walk, have been restored to the use of their limbs; also several laboring under hip disease and white swelling. Cases of club-feet have been made perfect in form, and many cases of weakness peculiar to women, and extraordinary cases of rupture relieved. After the reading of the reports an election was held for officers and a Board of Managers, when Jesse C. Guild was elected President, and James Lenox, John David Wolfe, R. H. Minturn, Stewart Brown, and J. R. Wetmore, Vice Presidents; Jonathan Sturges, Treasurer; R. M. Hartley, Corresponding Secretary and Joseph B. Collins, Recording Secretary.

COURT JOANNES VERSUS THE NEW-YORK LEDGER—THE EDITOR HELD TO BAIL.—A case of some interest came up yesterday at the Tombs Police Court, before Justice DOWLING. It appears that the celebrated Count Jeannes, otherwise known as Mr. GEORGE JONES, made a complaint in the court against Mr. JOHN CLANCY, the editor and proprietor of the New-York Ledger, wherein he charges Mr. CLANCY with having libeled him. The matter of which the Count complains was published in the editorial page of the last issue of the Ledger. From the affidavit it appears that the objectionable article was headed "Count no Account," and he claims that it is false and libelous, and in its effects seriously injurious to him. The affidavit was signed "Geneda, the Count JOANNES." A warrant was thereupon issued, and Mr. CLANCY was held to bail in the sum of $1,000 to answer the charge of libel in the Court of General Sessions. The latter has retained Ex-Judge James R. Worrell as his counsel on the case, Ex-Senator John J. BRADDY became Mr. CLANCY'S bondsman.

FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS WORTH OF COTTON STOLEN.—JAMES CURLEY, MICHAEL MOORE and HENRY WARDER were arraigned yesterday before Justice LEPWITZ, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, charged with stealing $400 worth of bale cotton from the hold of the steamship Morning Star, lying at Pier No. 47 North River. The testimony was quite conclusive as to the guilt of MOORE and WARDER, but the witnesses could not identify CURLEY in regard to CURLEY. The complaint was made by JAMES A. HAYNES, of No. 40 West-street. WARDER and MOORE were committed in default of $1,000 bail each. CURLEY was discharged. The cotton was found in a boat in the possession of the accused.

CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION OF THE NINETEENTH WARD.—A very intelligent meeting of citizens of the Nineteenth Ward took place last evening, in Nineteenth Ward Hall, for the purpose of rendering more complete the organization of the Association, and listening to interesting facts and statistics regarding municipal corruption. These were presented with great force by Messrs. S. D. MORGAN and J. D. WILLIAMSON. Mr. WM. H. WEBB, President of the Association, was in the chair, with Mr. LEWIS L. DELAFIELD as Secretary.

FREE MAPS.—The Home Insurance Company, of New-York, makes an excellent advertisement for themselves, while they present the public gratuitously with a large clear colored map showing the "Approaches from Washington to Richmond," and the "Strategetic Points of East Tennessee, Northern Alabama and Georgia." In these days, when every man is a strategist, a copy of this map should be in every man's house.

CAPTURE OF A BURGLAR.—Yesterday afternoon a burglar, just coming out of No. 8 Clinton-street, was detected by Sheriff MCNAMEE and Mr. CHRIS HANOVER, who gave chase, and on attempting to arrest the fellow he turned round and fired two shots from a revolver. None of them took effect. The parties continued to pursue him, and finally secured him in Fillmore-street. He had stolen the revolver and some money from the house he entered. The recovered was given into custody of Detective Fagan, and locked up. He refused to give his name.

NEW FIRE COMMISSIONER.—The Convention of Delegates to elect a Fire Commissioner for Brooklyn City, in place of Mr. ROBERT VAN VALKENBURGH, met on Tuesday evening, and selected Mr. JAN VALKENBURGH. He received twenty-nine out of a poll of forty-three votes. He is the President of the Board, and was declared elected for five years.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The news which we give this morning will send a thrill of joy throughout the country. Gen. GRANT, it seems, renewed the battle on Wednesday, and made good progress during the day, driving LEE out of his position at Spottsylvania, and capturing many prisoners, though of this day's operations the details are very meager. But yesterday morning Gen. HANCOCK, leading his whole corps, with the most sublime valor, made a terrific charge upon the rebels under A. P. HILL, and put them to ignominious route, leaving off as trophies of their gallant action one Major-General, two Brigadier-Generals, over three thousand prisoners and twelve pieces of artillery. This occurred five miles below Spottsylvania Court-house, and indicates that LEE was in full retreat.

The transports City Belle, Emma and Warner, and the gunboat Signal were fired upon and destroyed while passing a battery twelve miles below Alexandria, and the gunboat Covington was set on fire to prevent her falling into the hands of the rebels. This battery is composed of guns captured from Gen. BANKS; Gen. BANKS retakes it Alexandria, and is strong enough to resist any attack. During the fight above Alexandria, Admiral POREER's boat, the Cricket, suffered severely. The engineers were both killed, and many of the crew wounded. Gen. CASEY and Staff arrived at Cairo on Wednesday morning. The rebels are reported to have boarded the steamer Emma on the Red River, forced her crew into the hold, and then set her on fire.

Gen. STEELE's forces are fortifying Little Rock. Rebel cavalry have gone in the direction of Fort Smith, and it is surmised have captured the town of Dardanelle. The rebels, it is said, did not slaughter the colored troops at the battle of Saline River, but dressed the wounds of many and sent a flag of truce to Gen. STEELE asking for an exchange of prisoners. The reason assigned is that during Gen. STEELE's campaign the negroes took no prisoners.

Unofficial reports from Gen. SHERMAN report everything satisfactory, the rebels having been driven back to Rocky Ridge and Buzzard Roost Mountain after three days' steady fighting, in which all the corps participated.

An expedition is said to have left Vicksburgh for Yazoo City. An engagement was daily expected with the rebels under LEE, ROSS and ADAMS.

FROM EUROPE.

The steamship Africa, with Liverpool dates to the 29th ult., and Queenstown dates to the 1st inst., arrived at Halifax on Wednesday night. A party test vote had been taken in the House of Commons on the question of detaining the rebel prize Tuscaloosa, at the Cape. The Government were sustained by a majority of thirty-five. Lord DENBY brought up the subject of LAIRD's rams in the House of Lords—defending the builders. The commissioners which went to Egypt to procure evidence of their intended destination for the Viceroy's navies, was to be back on the 7th of May. The Danish Conference had temporarily suspended its sittings. The Atlantic cable is being manufactured at the rate of ten nautical miles a day. The Duke of Newcastle is again seriously ill. Lord PALMERSTON is also confined to his house. The news of BANKS' reverses had caused an advance of 2½ per cent in the rebel loan. At the Frankfort Shakespeare Tercentenary, some high words passed between the English and German guests. The American Consul acted the part of peacemaker.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. WILSON offered a bill authorizing every railroad in the United States to carry freight, passengers, mails, troops and Government supplies, and receive compensation therefor. It was resolved that the Secretary of War be directed to furnish the Senate with a list of all general officers in commission at or since the beginning of the present war. The bill altering the charter of the City of Washington so as to allow every male citizen to vote without regard to color, was brought up for argument, after which the Senate adjourned to Monday.

In the House of Representatives, yesterday, the resolutions of the New-York Chamber of Commerce recommending the extension of telegraphic communication with the Old World was presented. The House resumed the consideration of the bill to give homesteads from forfeited or confiscated lands to soldiers and sailors, without regard to color. The bill declaring the Harlem and Delaware Bay Railroad, and the Camden and Atlantic Railroad, to be public highways of the United States, was also considered.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Councilmen held quite a lengthy sitting yesterday, and disposed of considerable business. The Mayor sent in a message, stating that he had signed the appropriation ordinance for 1864, as adopted by the Common Council, because of the wants of the numerous claimants upon the City Treasury, but expressing his belief, that while the Common Council had an undoubted right to decrease appropriations authorized by the Legislature, still the cutting off of such items as the appropriation for an Inebriate Asylum, for the Blind Mechanics' Association, and for judgments which have been already obtained against the City, and which it is sworn is hence to pay, was injudicious. After some opposition, the message was received and ordered to be printed in the minutes. The Mayor also transmitted the resolution of the Commissioners of Health, recommending that the ordinance prohibiting bone boiling establishments within the City limits be amended to include fat-boiling establishments. The message was referred to the Committee on Board of Health. The Comptroller was directed to furnish the House of Refuge 3,000 loads of manure. A resolution was adopted directing the Comptroller to set apart rooms in the Police Court-house on Fifty-ninth-street, for the use of the Seventh District Justice's Court, now located in Eighth-street. The Comptroller reported that for the fortnight ending April 30, 18,498 families, comprising 84,099 persons, were relieved from the Volunteer Family Aid Fund, at an expense of $91,176. The fund was then overdrawn $62,819 99. The resolution adopted by the Aldermen setting apart a portion of the Central Park for a division parade-ground for the military, was discussed. The board refused to call upon the Central Park Commissioners for information on the subject, or to ask the opinion of the Corporation Counsel as to the powers of the Common Council in the premises, and finally refused to concur with the Aldermen in adopting the resolution. The paper was laid over. The board reconsidered its former resolution to meet but twice a month, and agreed to meet hereafter twice a week, as usual.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday JOSEPHINE WOODS and ISABEL MACDONALD, both of Eighth-street, were brought up upon a charge of keeping a disorderly house, and held to answer any indictment that might be brought against them. EDWARD TANNEY pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the fourth degree. Prisoner was indicted for stabbing a man named FITZGERALD, in August last.

The movements in Breadstuffs yesterday were more extensive, especially in Flour and Wheat, the receipts, sales and shipments of which were quite liberal. Prices of Wheat, Corn and Oats were firmer. A fair business was transacted in Cotton, Hay, Leather, Petroleum, Tallow, and the principal kinds of Provisions, which latter were somewhat unsettled in price. Whisky was heavy and cheaper. The freight engagements were quite large, particularly of Wheat for British ports, and rates were higher.

The Gold market was 1@1 ⅛ cent lower yesterday than on Wednesday. The Stock speculation generally tame, the Brokers being more interested to hear the result of the great battles in Virginia than in soliciting new orders from their customers. Money easy, at 6 ⅛ cent.

THE CAMPAIGN.—We, this morning, give a very comprehensive history of the great operations that have been going on in Virginia during the last week from the pen of Mr. SWINTON. The public, who have been so greatly confined in their efforts to learn from the telegrams the real character of Lieut.-Gen. GRANT's campaign, will find here something at once popular, picturesque and military.

The latest army news will be found on the eighth page. It is news of continuous triumph.

The Work to be Done.

There are many people, as is shown by the continued high price of gold, who are disappointed and made doubtful by the slowness of GRANT's advance, the obstinacy of LEE's resistance, and the magnitude of our losses. This is due mainly to the fact that there still lingers in the public mind much of the old delusion about the importance of capturing certain places. We have so long cherished the belief that the existence of the Confederacy depended on the possession of certain towns, that no amount of practical experience of its falsity seems sufficient to rid us of it. We have gone on flattering ourselves for three years that if we took New-Orleans, or took Charleston, or Vicksburgh, or took Richmond and reoccupied this and that point, "the back of the rebellion would be broken." The latest illustration of this craze was Gen. BANKS' march on Shreveport. There is very little doubt that he flattered himself that, when Shreveport fell, the Confederacy would shake to its centre.

It is only this year that a very considerable portion of the public has thoroughly wakened up to the fact, that owing to the enormous extent of the territory we seek to conquer, the occupation of places, is of comparatively little value. Of course, some places, such as the capital of the Confederacy have more value than others. The loss of Richmond would be a heavy blow and a great discouragement to the enemy; but it would be simply a moral blow. It would be a mortification, but unless it was an indication of weakness, it would be little more. For, we think it has for some time been very apparent, that the people of the South have passed beyond the stage in which their imagination has much power over them. They have lived for three years in the valley of the shadow of death; they have drank the cup of bitterness to the dregs. They have submitted to national bankruptcy, to the loss of slaves, to a general conscription, and to an absolute military tyranny. They are now wearing rags and half starving. For men in this condition it is clear that blows that are merely "moral" have no longer any terrors. In so far, therefore, as the loss of a place diminishes their supply of food, or clothing, or ammunition, it will affect them. If it does none of these things, they soon get over it.

Now if we took Richmond, but allowed LEE's army to retire southward without much damage, there is no question whatever we should not have made much progress. He would hold out in North Carolina or Georgia, conscript and impress supplies, and fight on as before, and we should have to follow him for hundreds of miles, slowly, continuously, and with difficulties of all kinds steadily increasing, the further we penetrated into the interior and away from our base.

Therefore, we ought to be devoutly thankful that he has chosen to fight it out in Virginia, and to fight obstinately. If he had fallen back without fighting, even if he had left Richmond at our mercy, we think there is very little doubt that it might have protracted the war for another year. But, by standing stubbornly, and defending every strong position, he gives us a chance of slowly destroying him; and when Lee's army is destroyed, let it be remembered, the rebellion is virtually over. There is no other to take its place. No doubt the process of destroying him is a bloody one, and costs us dearly; but it is not half as costly as it would be to chase him up and down the South for another year, losing men every day by the hundred in killed, wounded and sick. It would have been well indeed for us if we could have done in the first year of the war what we are doing to-day; if we could have drawn the mass of the Southern forces into Virginia, and fought them every day for a month, even if it had cost us 100,000 men, provided we had succeeded in the end in breaking up their army. We should have saved by it fifty 100,000 men, and many millions of treasure.

What will Come of It?—An Essential Difference.

While it would be presumptuous yet to affirm that GRANT will soon conquer his road to Richmond, it is certain that the present campaign will leave one of the great armies terribly worsted. The spirit of the two leaders, and of the two armies, will make it impossible for Richmond to be either taken, or not taken, this Summer, without a blow that shall absolutely disable either the one army or the other. Knowing that this blow must fall, we have a right to inquire which side is best prepared to endure it. Would it be alike damaging, or alike fatal, in either case?

A great deal has been said by some very well-meaning but over-sanguine journals about the growing discouragement of the rebels. We are bound to say that we have seen no evidence of it. On the contrary, we do not recollect a time for the last two years when the rebel papers, generally, have evinced so much satisfaction with the spirit of their people, and such steady confidence that their cause would triumph, as since this year has opened. Nor has this been entirely without reason. The fact that the Southern people have so calmly submitted to the unprecedented measures of the last rebel Congress—the levy en masse, the conversion, or rather, annihilation of the currency, the appropriation of all crops, present and future, for the use of the army—say what we may of it, shows great staunchness. It is weakness to call it the effect of intimidation. No Government that ever existed could ever cow a people, once free, into an absolutely silent submission to such measures. Were there serious discontent, it would be sure to find expression in some manner. The fact that Southern opinion sustains the extraordinary action at Richmond, indicates determination and not despondency. The military events of the last four months—the thwarting of all attempts on Charleston, the overthrow of SEYMOUR in Florida, the overthrow of BANKS in Louisiana, the bloody stroke at Fort Pillow, the successes on the North Carolina coast, the discomfiture of STEELE—have all been calculated to strengthen confidence. The fact that gold was constantly rising in the North was taken as a proof that our financial system was breaking down; and the noise made by our Copperheads about divisions in the Union party, and about the brightening prospects of the election of McCLELLAN to the Presidency, also operated as a stimulus. We are satisfied that when this month of May opened, the Southern people generally believed quite as strongly that "the Confederacy" would prevail, as we believed it would be broken down.

But, though the confidence on both sides may have been about the same in degree, it by no means follows that a reverse would have the same effect on either side. We believe the effect would be very different; that the overthrow of LEE would forever destroy Southern determination, while Northern determination would be only for the moment staggered by the overthrow of GRANT. In other words, we believe that the one confidence is founded on specious appearance, the other on solid fact.

The Richmond Whig of Friday last, in its article which we copied Wednesday, discloses the real character of the Southern feeling. It said:

"The people of the Confederacy are by no means prepared for the failure of LEE. They have not permitted themselves to contemplate the probability of anything but victory. They have made up their minds, unwisely, that the war must end one way or the other this year, forgetting quite that there can be but one way. If LEE should fail and his army be unsuccessful, we greatly fear that the majority of the people would begin to look the other way."

No paper in the Confederacy" is more zealous for the rebel cause than the sheet which uses this language. Would any war journal of the North, treating the contingency of GRANT's defeat, express any such fear of the Northern people? Does any one see anywhere a symptom of a disposition on the part of the Northern "majority" to make the decision of the war turn upon the favorable or unfavorable issue of this Summer's campaign? There is no such disposition, and not even the most reckless Copperhead print in the North will dare affirm it. Firm as is the trust of our people that the campaign will end triumphantly for the old flag, there is yet silently behind all that, a feeling that if the forces we already have under arms are not sufficient they shall be made sufficient. This season's work can come to no failure, which would not, in due time, stimulate to redoubled efforts, with redoubled means, in a future campaign. There is not a doubt that sooner than consent to the partition of the Republic, armies twice as large as those now in the field would be raised—armies which it would be physically impossible for any "confederate" force to withstand. The material exists—the patriotic spirit exists; and, if it must come to that, our "majority" will cheerfully accept the necessity.

And just here lies the essential difference in the two cases. The Southern rebels know that they are now using the maximum of their power, and that if this cannot avail them nothing can. The Northern people have no such consciousness. On the other hand, they know that their real numbers have not yet been a half, or even a quarter, drawn upon. They feel that they have immense reserves, while the rebellion has none, and thus that their ability to overcome the rebellion is as sure as anything earthly can be. Saying nothing about any difference in Northern and Southern character, or in the respective merits of the two causes in conflict, this difference in reserved strength of itself suffices to make a vast difference in the manner in which disaster would be received on this side or on that. The fear which the Richmond Whig expresses is precisely what might be expected of people placed in such a situation. Individuals may fight against all hope, but the "majority" never do. When hope departs they are sure to "begin to look the other way"—are sure to seek for peace. The Northern people would do the same thing. They would never maintain an absolutely hopeless contest. However much pride might urge, neither reason nor interest would consent. But, with our prodigious means still unused, hope cannot possibly desert us for a long time yet—certainly not during this campaign, or another, or yet another. Gen. GRANT may fail in his effort; but for all that we say our majority will not begin to look the other way. If he does not fail, we have the admission of the Richmond Whig, and it stands to reason, too, that the Southern majority will "begin to look the other way." That is just the difference.

TO ALL PATRIOTS.—Let the whole country send up prayers to Heaven for the protection of the great leader of our army, Lieut.-Gen. GRANT. His great lieutenant has fallen—SEDGWICK is no more. The heroic WADSWORTH sleeps in death. HAYS, STEVENSON, RICE and OWENS have fought their last fight. Many others of his staunchest Generals, scores upon scores of his Colonels, and hundreds of other invaluable officers, have been killed or put out of the field by wounds. How terrible the thought that some one of the million whizzing bullets may perchance strike the head or heart of Gen. GRANT. God save the Lieutenant-General! God save the Lieutenant-General!

LEE'S ARMY.—We are now beginning to comprehend the terrible significance of a phrase which has been in very frequent use for a long time—"the destruction of LEE's army." How little the public realized the full import of the words or of the thing. How little they comprehended the havoc in our own army which the effort must cause. LEE's army was a huge, strong, compact, fierce, ferocious mass. It was energized by hate, hardened by experience, toughened by time, and severely disciplined. It was determined not to be destroyed. Last week, however, we began to try it. A week of fearful battles, and fearful destruction to both sides, is the record. The work is by no means done yet. When it is done, and in other years, we shall begin to realize the magnitude of the bloody labor we undertook.

THE PEOPLE AND THE ARMY.—We have never in the course of the war, nor on the occurrence of any of its great battles, known such a deep and solemn feeling to pervade the community as that which has been dominant for the last few days, and especially yesterday. The public realized the greatness, the importance and the costliness of the struggle between our old Army of the Potomac and the army of LEE. They realized the carnage and felt the irreparable losses. The feeling was not one merely sensational, nor of mere excitement. It was profound and appreciative. Admiration of the deathless valor of our brave soldiers, and gratitude for their devotion was also universal.

GRANT'S FIRST PROPOSITION AND HIS LAST.—At the opening of Gen. GRANT's military career at Fort Donelson, he sent a proposition to Gen. BUCKNER, who had requested a cessation of hostilities after two days' fighting, in these words: "I propose to move immediately upon your works." We have had but few other propositions from him till now, when he makes another, after six days' fighting: "I propose," says he, "to fight it out on this line, if it takes all Summer." Both of these proposals are very cool, but terribly determined.

REBEL OPINIONS AND LOYAL FACTS.—Ten days ago, in the extreme dearth of news from GRANT's army, we copied into these columns, from the Richmond Enquirer, some speculations as to the strategy of the campaign then pending. The extract given was from a rebel correspondent writing from within LEE's lines at Orange Court-house. It is worth reproducing now that GRANT's strategy has been unfolded:

"The commonly received opinion that GRANT will attack Gen. LEE in front and in his fortifications is erroneous. He will seek to turn the flank of our army, and his policy is, evidently, to retain his present position until his organization and equipment be thoroughly accomplished, and then, by suddenly unfolding his strategy, to surprise Gen. LEE. He may march rapidly and without encumbrance either to some point of crossing the Rapidan or Rappahannock, or to Port Republic, thence to Staunton, thence to Lynchburgh. I think an attempt to flank on the east more probable; his army pressing at some of the lower fords of the Rappahannock. This, however, is all conjecture, and but the echo of Washington gossip."

This rebel writer had more accurate conceptions than Gen. LEE. His conjectures were right.

THE RED RIVER FLEET.—The interest which attaches to the late operations—unfortunate though they were—on the Red River, will insure for Admiral POREER's report, which appears in other columns, a general perusal. It will strike most readers, however, that the amount of labor, in the first place, wasted in attempting to recover the steamer Eastport, after her sinking by a torpedo, and the amount of space given in his report to details of the attempted recovery of the vessel, are out of proportion to the importance of the subject. We do not need a column of argument to convince us that such experienced and careful officers as Commander PEERE and his superior in this ill-starred expedition did everything that was possible, not only to save the Eastport, but also to bring back as many of the smaller fry of vessels as possible. What we are chiefly interested in is to procure additional light on the point of non-cooperation between the naval and land forces, on the apparent absence of any sufficient prearrangement to meet or provide against the obstructions in the river or on its banks, and on the seeming neglect to reckon on a dearth of the water necessary to float such craft as were employed in the expedition. On these points we have some light thrown in this report—if not exactly all that the public crave for. But we have no explanation intelligible to ordinary readers of naval and military history, of the circumstance that for many days there was no communication between the fleet and the army, or of the fact that the latter was sometimes marching forty miles a day when the Admiral supposed it was marching but twenty. Nor do we see why Admiral POREER should deem it necessary in this report to deprecate public censure upon the Red River operations, by appealing to Providence not to desert his cause and "permit the fleet to be sacrificed when it has so well performed its part in what should have been a complete success." The public have no desire either to prejudge or to condemn the fleet or its brave Commander. They only seek to find a reasonable cause for unanticipated failure.

THE DANES AND THEIR MAIDEN CITY.—There is probably less significance, in a military point of view, than at first sight appears in the report, which comes to us this morning by the Africa, that the stronghold of Fredericia and been evacuated by the Danes. The place, it is true, has a traditional interest from its successful resistance of hostile attacks in repeated sieges. In the present case, its capacity for defence does not seem to have been put to the test; the Danes probably considering it not only a hopeless task to make another stand within intrenched works after the surrender of the Dannewerke and the fort of Duppel, but an equally needless and unprofitable waste of strength, in view of the conference negotiations in London. After their losses at Duppel, their present fighting force in the field is probably under 20,000. But were it twice as much, no friendly counselor would advise Denmark to prolong the unequal contest, after having taken her seat in the conference. Upon her allied enemies must henceforth rest the responsibility of causing needless bloodshed, if the invasion should be prosecuted beyond the Provincial frontier. Unless the international council in London is to be a mockery alike of reason and of right, the intervening delegates of the three great neutral Powers will see to it, that at this point—if no formal armistice shall be proclaimed—at least a truce shall practically be called, while the preliminaries of the proposed arbitration are under consideration.

The Danes, by retiring from Fredericia to the Island of Fermern, have placed themselves in a position as little obnoxious as possible to the pretensions of the Allies, separated as they are from the disputed Peninsular territory by more than a mile of estuary. The state of affairs, then, looking to the military situation, is not unfavorable to a removal of the issue from the arbitrament of the sword, to the international tribunal now sitting. Failing this, a general war in Europe is the only possible result.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.—By the Africa we have the intelligence that the Tory party made the case of the Tuscaloosa rebel prize (detained at the Cape by orders from the Home Government) the occasion of testing their strength in the House of Commons. The result was a very notable defeat, considering how nearly balanced parties have been for the last two years. In a House of over 400 members the Government majority was 34. A simultaneous attack was made on Earl RUSSELL in the House of Lords by Lord DERBY, in connection with the Laird rams; but there the question was not put to the vote.

GARIBALDI AND THE WORKING CLASSES.—A singular contretemps (to call it by no stronger name) in the Garibaldi demonstrations, is seen in the report that the same day—the 23d of April—on which the working people of Naples were passing a series of resolutions expressive of their gratitude for the reception the Liberator had met in England—a meeting of workingmen, held in London, to protest against the quasi-compulsory departure of the General, was violently broken up by the Metropolitan Police—a body under Government control.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE N. Y. TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 12.

Fully two-thirds of those brought to the hospitals here as wounded, by careful estimate, are mere strikers, with only a slight bruise, or in most instances without a scratch. They have availed themselves of the confusion of battle and the character of the Wilderness to get out of line and make their way here among the really disabled.

SKULKERS TO BE SENT BACK TO THE ARMY.

Government has instructed thorough overhauling of hospitals, and all these skedaddlers will be promptly sent back to the army. The presence of officers among this crowd adds much to the disgrace of such conduct. Over a thousand officers and men have already been arrested by the provost guard, and placed in the old Capitol. The officers will be returned to Gen. GRANT in irons.

GEN. WARREN NOT KILLED.

The report of the death of Gen. WARREN is not correct. The rumor may have originated out of the death of Col. WARREN, while on his way from Fredericksburgh to this city.

COL. DELAFIELD NOMINATED AS BRIGADIER-GENERAL.

The President sent into the Senate to-day the nomination of Col. DELAFIELD as Brigadier-General, with a view to his appointment as Chief of Bureau of Engineering, in place of Gen. TOTTEN, recently deceased.

GENS. SCHOFIELD, WRIGHT AND HUMPHREYS CONFIRMED AS MAJOR-GENERALS.

An excited contest over the nomination of Gen. SCHOFIELD as Major-General, in Executive session to-day, failed to prevent his confirmation—twenty-five yeas to nine nays. Gens. WRIGHT and HUMPHREYS were also confirmed as Major-Generals.

LATEST ADVICES FROM ARKANSAS.

By the arrival of Gen. STEELE's Chief of Staff here we have latest advices from Arkansas. STEELE's army is back at Little Rock, after a desperate fight with Price, in which the rebels were severely punished. Our rebels having had all their supply trains captured, were three days without provisions. The rebels are preparing an attack upon Little Rock, and an assault is looked for daily.

RUMORS ABOUT GEN. WADSWORTH'S DEATH.

It is not yet certain that Gen. WADSWORTH was killed. Col. SHAW has not possession of his body, as reported, and the belief exists among several of his friends here that he may yet be heard of living.

GEN. FORREST'S CAPTURE BY THE GUERRILLAS.

Gen. Forrest, who is here under treatment for his wound, was really captured by guerrillas near Fredericksburgh. They stopped the ambulance in which he and a number of other men were, but the General having his seat of disabled recognition, and the gentlemen of the highway contented themselves by taking the horses and the black driver, leaving the wounded man unmolested.

ARE THE RAILROADS TO CARRY PROPERTY, MAILS AND THE GOVERNMENT SUPPLIES.

At a special meeting of the Senate Military Committee, this morning, they unanimously instructed the Chairman to report the following joint resolutions:

Whereas, The Constitution of the United States confers upon Congress, in express terms, power to regulate commerce among the several States, to establish post-roads, and to raise and support armies; therefore

Resolved, That every railroad company in the United States whose road is operated by states, its successors and assignees, be and is hereby authorized to carry upon and over its road, connections, ferries, bridges and ferries, all freight, property, mails, passengers, troops and Government supplies on their way from any State to any other State, and to receive compensation therefor.

Legislation containing in this resolution is all that the Harlem Bay party now ask. The House passed the Harlem Bay measure to-day by a majority of six.

THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Important from the Red River—Two Gunboats and Three Transports Destroyed Below Alexandria—Movements of Gen. Banks—The Expedition against Yazoo City.

FROM CAIRO.

CAIRO, Wednesday, May 11.

The dispatch boat Gen. Lyon, from below, reports that on the 8th inst. the transports City Belle, Emma and Warner, in passing a battery twelve miles below Alexandria, were fired upon and destroyed.

The gunboat Signal was also destroyed by the battery, and the gunboat Covington was set on fire, to prevent her falling into the hands of the rebels.

This battery is composed of guns captured from Gen. BANKS.

Gen. BANKS retakes at Alexandria, and is strong enough to resist any attack made upon him.

During the fight above Alexandria, when the gunboat Eliot was destroyed, the Cricket, Admiral PORTER's boat suffered severely. Both engineers were killed, and many of the crew wounded.

Gen. CASEY and Staff arrived here this morning.

It is reported that the rebels boarded the steamer Emma, on the Red River, forced her crew into the hold, and then set fire to her. This report is not vouched for.

On Saturday night a small band of guerrillas passed between the camp and picket post of an expedition sent out by Gen. PAINE, from Columbus, Ky., under Col. HOGAN. The guerrillas pounced upon our picket at farm near Mayfield, and captured the whole of them without our forces having anything about it until after it was accomplished.

FROM MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, Tuesday, May 10.

Advices from Vicksburgh state that an expedition had left there for YAZOO City.

The rebel Gens. LEE, ROSS and ADAMS are at YAZOO City, with a large force, and an engagement was daily expected.

The rebel Gen. FERGUSON had passed Southward. Gen. SOGRATES was unable to come up with him.

The rebel Gens. FORREST, CHALMERS, ROSER and LEE, are said to be at Tupelo, where they had a grand review on Saturday last.

An escaped Union cavalry officer reports Union sympathizers at Jackson and Bolivar, Tenn.

The steamer Belle, of Memphis, has arrived from Memphis, with 106 bales of cotton.

The steamer Commercial has arrived at Memphis from Little Rock, with 917 bales of cotton.

Gen. STEELE's forces were actively engaged in fortifying Little Rock.

All was quiet on the Arkansas River.

Rebel cavalry had gone in the direction of Fort Smith, and it was rumored that they had taken Dardanelle, a small town below Fort Smith.

It is said the rebels did not carry out their system of slaughtering colored troops at the battle of Saline River, but took many of the wounded, dressed their wounds and sent a flag of truce to Gen. STEELE for an exchange of prisoners. The reason assigned for this is that the negroes, during the whole of Gen. STEELE's campaign, took no prisoners.

A rebel force is said to be in the immediate vicinity of Pine Bluff, Ark.

Eight hundred bales of cotton were sold at Memphis on Saturday. Six hundred bales brought 71c. per pound, and the remainder 70c.@72c. The total receipts for the week were 2,116 bales, and the shipments 2,208 bales. Middling was quoted 72c.@72c. good middling, 75c.@76c.; and fair, 77c.@78c.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 12.

CONCERNING RAILROAD AND POST ROUTES.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Union,) from the Military Committee, reported the following without amendment:

WHEREAS, the Constitution of the United States confers upon Congress, in express terms, the power to regulate commerce among the several States; to establish post roads, and to raise and support armies; therefore

Resolved, That every railroad in the United States, which is operated by steam, its successors and assigns, be and are hereby authorized to carry upon and over its road, connections, boats, bridges and ferries all mails, property, troops and munitions of War and Government supplies, on their way from one State to any other, and to receive compensation therefor.

CONCERNING GENERAL OFFICERS.

On motion of Mr. WILSON, it was received that the Secretary of War be directed to furnish the Senate a list of all general officers of the regular or volunteer forces in commission at the beginning of the present war or appointed since, with the States in which they were born and from which they were appointed, designating those whose nominations have been withdrawn from the Senate, those which have expired by constitutional limitation, not having been confirmed by the Senate, those declined, resigned, dropped, discharged, dismissed or mustered out of the service, and those who have died in the service.

THE CHARTER OF THE CITY OF WASHINGTON.

Mr. HARLAN, of Iowa, (Union,) called up the bill to alter and amend the charter of the City of Washington and preserve the purity of elections. The bill, as reported, allows every male citizen to vote without regard to color. The pending question was on an amendment of Mr. COWAN to insert the word "white" as a qualification for voters.

Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, (Union,) moved a substitute for the amendment, that all citizens of the United States, who have been inhabitants of this District for one year, and a resident in the locality where they propose to vote, having a taxable estate, who can read and write, shall be qualified as electors.

The Chairman ruled the amendment out of order.

Mr. HARLAN, who reported the bill, would vote for the amendment, however much he opposed it, as he was convinced it would fail unless the word "white" was inserted in the other chamber.

Mr. MORRILL advocated the principles of his substitute.

Mr. THE EVIL, of New-Jersey, (Union,) said the effect of this measure would be like the measure in the House yesterday parceling out rebel lands which were even now being stained with the best blood of the country. We had better wait until we had achieved a conquest before we begin to quarrel on such matters. All these measures grew out from as many who were inclined to rally on our standard. The proposition of the Senator from Maine did not simply extend the right of franchise to colored persons, but restricted it in certain cases to the whites. This was not in his opinion the time to strip the white man of any privileges, though he may not be able to read or write, much less of his unalienable right of franchise. If we passed the bill, every relative of the noble-hearted soldier, who was to-day offering himself upon his country's altar, would receive the vote of the Senate with a burst of indignation. It would freeze the patriotism in the veins of our soldiers and cause them to stand as dumb statues.

Mr. WILSON was, while willing to give the colored soldier who is fighting the battles of his country the right of suffrage, was unwilling to take it away from those who now enjoy it; and he therefore opposed both the substitute and the amendment. After quoting the law of New-York relating to colored suffrage, which prescribed a qualification of $250, he argued that such a clause as this as a qualification in this bill would be a start in the right direction.

Mr. COWAN, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) showed that many of the States had statutes against negro suffrage, and it would be dangerous to attempt it here at this time.

Mr. LANE, of Kansas, (Union,) would vote for the proposition without the property qualification, as he considered that giving the suffrage to the property owner not the land. He would, after three years, in which the negroes could learn our institutions, bestow free suffrage upon them.

Mr. WILKES, of West Virginia, (Union,) argued against the proposition on the ground that the right to vote was purely conventional, and that it rested solely with communities to bestow the privileges of the franchise. He said the inhabitants of Washington were opposed to this measure nearly unanimously. He depicted the evils which would flow from bestowing the high privilege upon the masses of uneducated slaves, especially in Washington, whose population, according to the present ratio of increase, would in five years be composed of colored people. The passage of the measure would not only be injurious to the colored race itself, but would irritate the whole country, and especially the Border States. He said this was one who had emancipated slaves by the sweat of his own brow. It was idle to suppose that we could confer the high privileges of civilization by a mandate of the pen or by acts of Congress upon a degraded and ignorant race.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) said Slavery died hard, not in this chamber and on the battlefield. We have been compelled before to listen to a vindication of the slave code and the slave hunter on this floor, and to-day the exclusion of colored persons from the franchise has been advocated by the Senator from West Virginia, who was himself introduced into this chamber by the influences of freedom. He rises here to vindicate Slavery in one of its meanest productions.

Mr. WILKES denied that he defended Slavery. When the Senator had liberated as many slaves as he had, he could afford to call him a friend of the slave, and not before. When the Senator gets his other bill through, to allow negroes to testify in courts of justice, he could bring a half a dozen witnessed to testify that he was a better friend of freedom and emancipation than the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. SUMNER said the gentleman had the odious prejudice arising out of his former connection with Slavery still in him. The head of the beast had been cut off but the Senator still clung to the tail.

Mr. COWAN denied the right of the Senator from Massachusetts to denounce those who denied suffrage to negroes as advocating Slavery. The assumption was false and only betrayed ignorance and resentment. What an idea it was that West Virginia should get heaved at the will of the Senator, in order to be in the line of promotion. He thought the Senator should have been called to order for his remarks. He was certainly out of order among gentlemen.

Mr. COWAN proceeded at length to argue against the bill, and to maintain his amendment to it, maintaining that Illinois had not only refused negro suffrage, but by 60,000 majority excluded them from the State altogether. New-York and Pennsylvania were alike unanimous against the measure.

Without action, the Senate, on motion of Mr. WILSON, went into Executive session.

The doors were reopened, and the Senate on motion of Mr. LANE, (Kansas,) adjourned to Monday.

New-Jersey Union State Convention.

TRENTON, Thursday, May 12.

The Convention reassembled at 2½ o'clock P.M.

The Committee on Permanent officers reported for President, THOMAS H. HAZARD, of Bergen; a Vice-President from each county, and a Recording Secretary from each district.

The following delegates were selected to attend the Baltimore Convention:

Senatorial—Wm. A. Newell, Marcus L. Ward, Joseph T. Crowell, James M. Scovel.

District Delegates—First, Edward Brettle, of Camden; Theophilus Pangling, of Salem. Second, Hon. Wm. F. Brown, of Ocean; Samuel A. Dobbins, of Burlington. Third, John P. Blair, of Warren; A. D. Hope, of Somerset. Fourth, Socrates Tuttle, of Passaic; Joseph Cole, of Sussex. Fifth, Charles E. Waugh, of Essex; Benjamin G. Clark, of Hudson. Alternates were also appointed for each district.

Resolutions were adopted declaring the suppression of the rebellion the only question worthy at this time of attention, and that all party considerations ought to be given up to this end; eulogizing the Administration, and declaring it entitled to the gratitude of the country; approving the acts and eulogizing the character of the President, and, while not instructing the Delegates, declaring that he ought to be permitted to finish the great work, the burdens of which he has borne; returning thanks to the Generals and soldiers in the field, and expressing sympathy for the dead; regarding the present struggle as the against the despotism of Slavery; denouncing the action of the last Legislature in not allowing the soldiers to vote in the field; declaring that, as Slavery is the cause and purpose of the rebellion, the uprooting of the rebellion will be the destruction of its cornerstone; asking men of all parties to support the nominee of the Baltimore Convention.

The convention was very large and enthusiastic. There was quite a desperate fight in the convention between the friends and opponents of Hon. JAMES M. SCOVEL, of Camden. In his own district, the first he was defeated. He then appealed to the convention in a stirring speech, representing that he had been stabbed in the back by certain entrusted influences. He appealed to the counties in his district, and to the convention, and when the convention was called upon to vote, they elected him a New-

Wesson's Gold Pens are now sold at the same prices as before the commencement of the war; this is entirely owing to the Manufacturer's improvement in machinery, his present large Retail Business and Cash-in-Advance System; for, until he commenced advertising, his business was done on Credit and wholly with the Trade.

The Morton Gold Pens are the only ones sold at old prices, as the makers of all other gold pens charge the Premium on the Gold, Government Tax, &c., but Morton has in no case changed his prices, wholesale or retail.

Of the great numbers sent by mail to all parts of the world during the past few years, not one in a thousand has failed to reach its destination in safety; showing that the Morton Gold Pen can be obtained by any one in every part of the world, at the same price, postage only excepted.

Reader, you can have an enduring, always ready, and reliable Gold Pen, exactly adapted to your hand and style of writing, which will do your writing vastly cheaper than Steel Pens; and at the present almost universal High-Pressure Price of everything, you can have a Morton Gold Pen cheaper, in proportion to the labor spent upon it and material used, than any other Gold Pen in the World. If you want one, see "The Pen is Mightier than the Sword," in another column.

Work on the Dunderberg.

This five-deck ram (the largest vessel of the kind in the world) will probably be ready for launching about the middle of next month. The armor on the casemate has been laid around the "keel," the extreme end of the prow, has been successfully cast and will be put in position during the week. There are at present over five hundred men engaged in the construction of the vessel and her machinery. The delaying the work on the Dunderberg, which has been nearly two years on the stocks, was occasioned by the difficulty of completing her machinery, owing to the crowded state of the different iron works under contract with the Government. This was not the fault of any of the parties concerned in the building of the ram; but was the result of the necessities of the Navy Department. It was thought at Washington that all necessary repairs to those vessels have already about should first be attended to, before the work on the iron-clads should be progressed with.

The immense propeller and shaft of the Dunderberg are completed, and as soon as they are adjusted preparations will be made for launching the vessel. The dimensions of the vessel are: Length, 378 feet; breadth of beam, 70 feet; depth of hold, 23 feet. She is 7,000 tons burden, and will have an engine of 1,500 horse power. The plates with which the vessel is clad are of wrought iron, 4½ inches thick.

THE CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION.—This association has about perfected its machinery, which will be permanent and under the care of experienced and faithful engineers. Every department of the City Government will come under its watchfulness, and every interest of the City guarded. For an organization in which the movers are entirely unselfish—have no political ends to gain—neither seek or would take place—work for the sole isolated purpose of the public good, it is one of the most admirably systematized, and prospectively the most formidable ever known in this or any other country. Its primal only purpose is purifying our municipal government, reducing our taxation, defending our benefits. All classes of citizens have lent their countenance to it, party has been ignored, and the experiment is about to be tried whether an intelligent, frank appeal to the common sense, public pride and self interest of the community will prevail against the party influences and party whips which have hitherto carried the day. That it will, the powerful organizations in the several wards very plainly indicate. A good time is surely coming. As the association is a novel and attractive, from its beauty, interesting from the theory on which it is founded, it remembers its very interest of our citizens and designed guarding them; serial reference will hereafter be made to the system with which its workings will be conducted. When these are given to the public there will be no doubt of its complete success and value, as of its early and decisive success.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE HOWARD MISSION.—The anniversary of this institution took place at the Academy of Music last Tuesday evening, a very large audience being in attendance. Rev. Dr. SPRINGER presided and made the opening address. Rev. Mr. VAN METER read the annual report, showing that about 1,300 children had, during the year, been provided for. The exercises consisted of addresses by Rev. Dr. DE WITT TALMAGE, of Philadelphia, Rev. Dr. ANDERSON and Rev. MATTHEW HALE SMITH, interspersed with music, during which gleeful by the children of the institution, of whom nearly one hundred occupied seats upon the stage. A large collection for the benefit of the Mission was taken up during the evening.

SECRETARY:
G. WHITE ROOSEVELT.
The Citizens' Association of the XVth Ward will hold a large meeting at HOPE CHAPEL, on MONDAY, the 16th inst., at 8 o'clock P. M.
Citizens generally are cordially invited to attend.
By order of JAMES BROWN, President.

A PUBLIC MEETING WILL BE HELD at the Cooper Union, on MONDAY, May 16, at 1 o'clock P. M.
The object of the meeting is to call the attention of women to the injury inflicted upon the country in this crisis by the extravagant purchase of imported luxuries, such as silks, satins, velvets, laces, diamonds and objects of vertu, and to suggest to their consideration the propriety of abstaining from such articles of foreign manufacture until the present unhappy crisis shall have passed.
It is not proposed to encourage the abandonment of any articles necessary even for comfort, but simply that the above named luxuries, whose import creates the necessity of sending enormous amounts of gold out of the country, should, for the present, cease to be matters of daily use and purchase; and thus the gold should be retained in the country, to aid our Government.
Elsewhere this movement has been already suggested. Women, who have devoted themselves to the services of their country's defenders, have passed in the midst of labor and suffering to ask: "Is there nothing more to be done?" and they have been taught that a mightier help than any they have yet given may be rendered by simple self-denial for outward adorning. Can a light-thinking patriotic woman hesitate to make so paltry a sacrifice?
The Committee of Ladies, who have been active in this movement, and being fully persuaded of its utility and seasonableness, forward it by every means in their power, they call upon the women of New-York to meet their neighbors by joining in this meeting, listening to the statistics which will there be given, and learning what they are doing by visiting the extravagances of the times, and their duty in regard to it.
Several speeches will be made, and at the close of the meeting an opportunity will be given to all who are willing to join in the movement to enroll their names.

THE GREAT CAMPAIGN.

ring a shot, capturing them at the point of the bayonet. As they rushed on they captured the enemy by hundreds, rushing upon them with a fury that nothing could withstand. To the number of twelve hundred they run them back into our lines at full speed, capturing at the same time three of their guns. Earlier in the day one of the enemy's batteries had been disabled and all the ammunition driven from the guns, from which they were kept by the savage fire of our skirmishers. It was hoped that all the guns would be brought off, but the charge was not successful on the other parts of the line, and the gallant Sixth had to fall back. Our losses during the day must reach from eight to ten thousand men.

WARD's Brigade, Second Corps, lost heavily—the Twentieth Massachusetts particularly. Col. MACY was dangerously wounded. Maj. ABBOT, another splendid officer, was killed, and only six or seven officers, out of about twenty-four, left. Lieut. PENNIMAN, of the First Massachusetts, took a section into action in a spot where the rebel sharpshooters had a sweeping fire. He was taken from the field, shot in both thighs, after doing good service. This was on WRIGHT's front.

Gen. WARD was hit in the neck early in the day, but would not leave the field, and afterward led his brigade in the charge on HANCOCK's front. A battery of CONURS's, on WRIGHT's front, did good service, throwing their shells into the rebel intrenchments. Capt. MARTIN, of the Third Massachusetts Battery, was wounded in the neck.

The losses of the army up to this time exceed anything that any previous battle has cost us. Nothing has been developed up to this hour respecting the enemy's position or intentions for the day, and there is nothing to indicate whether they will retreat, remain on the defensive, or assault.

Over Five Hundred Union Prisoners Retaken.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 12.

News received to-day continues to be of a most satisfactory character.

Early in the day Secessionists were unusually exultant and open-mouthed. They claimed to have certain intelligence, by channels known only to the initiated, that GRANT was this side of the Rapidan, BURNSIDE had been cut to pieces, and black troops, who had caused all this disaster by dastardly conduct, were all captured. Evidence of falsity of such stuff accumulated during the morning so rapidly and irrepressibly, that nerves of the most timid individuals calmed down. Details of yesterday's fight have not reached here.

Fighting was renewed this morning at daylight by HANCOCK. In a most brilliant assault he fell upon A. P. HILL's division in its intrenchments, five miles below Spottsylvania Court-house. HANCOCK was in his best mood, and as he led his eager men into the affray he is described as being the very impersonification of war. No more flesh and bones could stand up before such a charge as was there made. The rebels broke in every direction, leaving trophies of victory in our hands—one Major-General, two Brigadiers, fifty officers, three thousand prisoners, and twelve pieces of artillery.

DISPATCHES FROM THE WAR OFFICE.

FIRST DISPATCH.

[OFFICIAL.]

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, May 11—11:30 P. M.

Maj.-Gen. Dix:

Dispatches from Gen. GRANT, dated at 8 o'clock this morning, have just reached this department. He says:

"We have now ended the sixth day of very heavy fighting. The result up to this time is much in our favor. Our losses have been heavy, as well as those of the enemy. I think the loss of the army must be greater. We have taken over 4,000 prisoners in battle, while he has taken from us but few except stragglers. I propose to fight it out on this line, if it takes all Summer."

The Government is sparing no pains to support him.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

SECOND DISPATCH.

[OFFICIAL.]

WASHINGTON, May 12—8:15 P. M.

To Maj.-Gen. Dix:

No dispatches from the Army of the Potomac have been received since 11:30 o'clock last night.

Gen. SHERMAN has not been heard from, owing, probably, to the damage to the lines south of Nashville by the recent storm.

A dispatch from Gen. SHERIDAN, dated "Headquarters of the Cavalry Corps, May 10," states that he turned the enemy's right, and got into their rear, had destroyed from eight to ten miles of railroad, two locomotives and three trains, and a very large quantity of supplies; and that since he had got into their rear there was great excitement among the inhabitants and with the army. The enemy's cavalry had tried to annoy his rear and flank, but had been run off, and he had recaptured five hundred of our men—two of them Colonels.

No dispatches have been received for two days from Gen. BUTLER.

Dispatches received from Gen. STEELE report his command as having arrived at Little Rock. He had fought a superior force of the enemy, commanded by KIRBY SMITH in person, at Saline River, and defeated them.

A steamboat from Red River, arrived to-day at Cairo, reports reinforcements going up to Gen. BANKS.

Gen. CANBY had passed Cairo on his way to Red River.

Secretary of War.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON.

The Fighting Renewed on Wednesday—Our Lines Advance—A Flag of Truce from Gen. Lee—Wants Time to Bury His Dead—Grant says He Hasn't Time to Bury His Own Dead, and Proposes to Advance—Lee Withdraws His Centre—Evidences of a Retreat—Over Four Thousand Prisoners Captured on Tuesday and Wednesday—The Losses.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 12.

Yesterday morning the fighting was again renewed, and was continued with various success until about 11 o'clock, when our line was somewhat advanced.

At that hour a flag of truce is reported to have been sent by LEE, who asked for a cessation of hostilities for forty-eight hours, that he might bury his dead.

Gen. GRANT replied that he had not time to bury his own dead, and would advance immediately; and some parts of our line were therefore pushed forward.

It is stated that the woods were shelled, but no square was shelled from where the enemy's centre had been a few hours before.

The prisoners captured on Tuesday and Wednesday number over 4,000. The rebel dead and wounded were found covering almost every foot of ground wherever our troops surged forward and the rebels gave way.

The slaughter among our troops was terrible, but not so great as that of the enemy, and but few captures were made by the latter.

The Desperate Fighting of Tuesday—The Charge of the Sixth Corps—The Battle Probably Renewed Wednesday—Death of Gens. Rice and Stevenson—Incidents of the Battle.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 12.

Dispatches from the Army of the Potomac, dated Wilderness battle-field yesterday, say, probably the most desperate fighting of the past seven terrible days took place on Tuesday.

Believing the enemy to have sent a greater part of his troops to Richmond, an advance along the entire line was determined on at an early hour.

The Second Corps having the right of the line, had crossed the Po River the evening previous, and had met with but slight opposition.

In the morning the position of the enemy was found to be in the shape of a horseshoe, and on HANCOCK's troops advancing to attack they were compelled to fall back.

An attempt to break their centre was then ordered, and part of HANCOCK's men were sent to support WARREN in the movement.

Our right was also advanced, and the move was begun in the afternoon.

The enemy were driven into their intrenchments in gallant style, and GRESE's brigade of WRIGHT's division, Sixth Corps, got into the enemy's rifle pits, capturing twelve guns and about one thousand prisoners.

Not being supported by other portions of the line, who were unable to gain the tier of works in their front, this brigade was forced to evacuate its advanced position, leaving the captured guns, after spiking them, but bringing off all the prisoners.

The enemy suffered heavy losses during the fight, our shells falling into their works, and our infantry delivering their fire with remarkable precision.

Gen. RICE was wounded in the thigh early in the engagement, and died after his leg had been amputated.

Gen. STEVENSON is also reported killed. He commanded a brigade in BURNSIDE's corps.

Our losses were very heavy.

Gen. GRIFFIN's division has lost altogether over a thousand men.

Gen. ROBINSON's division, after losing both its general officers and about two thousand five hundred men, had no General to command it, and it has been broken up and distributed among other divisions of the Fifth Corps.

No division of the army fought better than this one.

The Ninth New-York State Militia fought gallantly, and suffered probably more than any other regiment in the field. After the action four officers and fifteen men were all that was left of it, excepts few on detached duty.

Lieut. LUTZ, of the Ninetieth Pennsylvania, had his head blown off by a piece of shell.

About six o'clock in the evening a report was brought into Gen. MEADE's headquarters that a flank movement was being made on our right, and the headquarters being in that direction, they packed up and moved toward the centre in a hasty manner.

The report turned out to be false, and the officer who made it is said to have been censured.

This day's battle was expected to be decisive of the contest.

The firing, the commencement side, has already commenced.

The rebels are in very strong positions behind earthworks, abatis and rifle-pits, and in many places it is almost impossible to penetrate to them.

BURNSIDE is reported to be within a mile of SPOTTSYLVANIA Court-house, about to turn the rebel right.

If he is successful we shall obtain possession of the point which the struggle has been for during the past three days, and then LEE must retreat.

At 1 o'clock on Tuesday a lull ensued between the two armies, at a point in the line, and a large number of wounded of both parties were lying on the spot.

Our men, in attempting to get their comrades off this field, were fired on by the rebel skirmishers and driven off, and the poor sufferers had to be left to perish in the flames.

The embalmer here says that he has received orders to be ready to embalm the body of Col. WARREN, not Gen. WARREN. The former rode along the lines all day Tuesday, and fearlessly exposed himself.

Gentlemen prominently connected with the Government are to-day in good spirits, in view of the recent military events in Virginia, and consider our final triumph merely a question of time. Movements are in progress which will soon be publicly developed, forming a part of the general plan, looking to success.

Gen. WEAR's family heard from him on Wednesday night, and up to that time he had not been wounded.

The Intro Star says the body of Gen. STEVENSON arrived here this morning on the steamer Utica.

Gen. BURNSIDE directed to have his friends in Washington told that everything looked very favorable and hopeful.

Hill Repulsed by Burnside—Gallant Conduct of the Colored Troops—Everything Looking Hopeful—Sigel Believed to Have Reached Lynchburgh.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 12.

It was Gen. HILL's corps that Gen. BURNSIDE repulsed so gallantly.

The Star says:

Gen. BURNSIDE's colored troops were held in reserve, but were subsequently brought into action and fought with desperation.

Their officers expected to have considerable difficulty in restraining them, as they appeared desirous not to take any prisoners, being exasperated by the remembrance of Fort Pillow and the atrocities committed there by the rebels on their race.

It was believed in the army that SIGEL, having made forced marches, had destroyed LEE's railroad connections with Lynchburgh, and that SHERIDAN had done the same to his communications with Richmond.

An order was given for another advance yesterday morning.

At 8 o'clock A. M., when our informant left, our centre and right were heavily engaged with the rebels.

The Ninth Corps was then on the march.

Our losses are represented to have been very heavy, but everything looks hopeful.

Prominent officers say that we shall soon see the end.

REPORTS FROM PHILADELPHIA.

Lee Out of Supplies and Orders his Men to Capture them—The Flag of Truce—The Loss of the Enemy.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, May 12.

The Bulletin, of this city, has the following special dispatch:

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 12.

It is confirmed that in an order issued on Monday, found on some prisoners, that Gen. LEE notified his army that his communication with Richmond was broken, and no rations could be drawn from thence, and he advised them to capture supplies from our army.

Gen. GRANT had captured up to yesterday about 6,000 prisoners. Part of a regiment was captured entire. It was composed of men who had been exchanged but a few weeks since.

The loss of the enemy in killed is much greater than ours. His wounded are supposed to be about the same.

The latest edition of the Star of this afternoon has the following:

"Gen. LEE is reported to have asked for a cessation of hostilities to bury his dead.

Gen. GRANT replies that he has not had time to bury his own dead, and that he proposes to advance immediately.

The woods were shelled, and Gen. LEE turned up missing in front.

Yesterday morning the fighting was again resumed and continued with varying success until about 11 o'clock, when our line had somewhat advanced.

LATER.—Up to this morning we have received no confirmation of the rumor in regard to Gen. LEE above mentioned, but the fact that such a report was current in Fredericksburgh yesterday shows the buoyant feeling there in regard to our position, based upon a knowledge of general facts of a hopeful nature."

GEN. BUTLER'S ARMY.

Bear-regard at Petersburgh with Twenty-Five Thousand Men—All the Railroads Cut Leading to the City—A Siege Probable—The Monitors Near Fort Darling.

BEAUFORT HEADQ., Va., Tuesday, May 10.

Nothing definite has yet been accomplished by our forces in the way of captures, but everything looks favorable.

BEAUREGARD, with about 25,000 men, is in Petersburgh, and we have all the railroads cut leading to that city, and forces enough to keep BEAUREGARD there until he surrenders.

We shall, it is reported, soon commence a siege of that place.

There are four monitors and several gunboats within four miles of Fort Darling, ready to cooperate with our land forces, (a part of them,) abreast of the monitors. Our forces occupy a strong position, and are strong enough to hold it.

It is supposed that Gen. KEYES is now to the south of Petersburgh, aiming at the destruction of railroads leading south from Richmond. Correspondents have probably announced his defeat, many of his troops captured, &c. It is not believed here. BEAUREGARD has no cavalry.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, April 11.

The latest advices from the front state that the gunboat Brooklyn was blown up on the Appomattox yesterday by a rebel battery. No statement in regard to the loss of life.

Fighting was going on all day yesterday. The main position appeared to be on our right. The troops were under command of Gen. SMITH. The turnpike between Richmond and Petersburgh was the bone of contention. Up to 3 P. M. to-day nothing later has been received.

We receive but few papers from the North now, most all of them having been stopped; most of our dispatches are suppressed.

Petersburgh has not been abandoned, burned, nor as yet besieged. BEAUREGARD is there in command. Fort Darling is still in the hands of the rebels.

The bark Dana Darden, ashore near Cape Henry, with a cargo of iron, steel, block tin, &c., will prove a total loss.

A report just received states that Col. SPEAR has burned the long bridge near Walden, and two others; that he made three charges, and the third time succeeded. I give this for what it is worth. My informant heard Col. SPEAR tell it.

The following additional names of wounded have been received within the last twenty-four hours from Gen. BUTLER's army:

D. Maran, 76th Pennsylvania.
J. Richardson, 112th New-York.
Sergt. J. R. Minster, 5th Penn. Cavalry.
T. J. Campbell, 5th Penn. Cavalry.
J. P. Dockey, 5th Penn. Cavalry.

M. Fish, 5th Penn. Cavalry.
J. Ketterer, 5th Penn. Cavalry.
H. Garkan, 5th Penn. Cavalry.
F. Seimmer, 5th Penn. Cavalry.

In addition to these, about 150 sick have been sent to the Hampton and Chesapeake Hospitals.

FROM NEWBERN.

The latest advices from Newbern state that the rebels are again threatening the place, that they have possession of the railroad, and that last Thursday they demanded the surrender of Moseheat City. Our forces retreated, and the rebels destroyed the railroad and retired. It is rumored that they have 8,000 men, and purpose to invest Newbern.

The fight on Thursday between our fleet and the rebel gunboats in Albemarle Sound lasted several hours, and the rebel iron-clads retired up the Roanoke River.

IMPORTANT FROM GEN. SHERMAN.

The Rebels Driven to Rocky Ridge and Buzzard Roost Mountains.

EVERYTHING SATISFACTORY.

TUNNEL HILL, Ga., Wednesday, May 11.

After three days' heavy skirmishing, in which all the corps participated, we have driven the rebels back to Rocky Ridge and Buzzard Roost Mountains, from which we are fast expelling them.

Everything is going on in a most satisfactory way.

A Rebel Iron-clad off Wilmington—She is Driven In.

BOSTON, Thursday, May 12.

The Journal gives the following extract from a letter dated off New-Inlet, near Wilmington, May 7:

"Four rebel steamers came out last night. One was the iron-clad North Carolina, similar to the Atlanta. She was supposed to be a blockade-runner, and was chased off shore. At daylight the iron-clad returned under the guns of the fort. The Niagara and Nansemond were near, and the Niagara was to the northward. One shot from the North Carolina went through the Niagara's smoke-stack. The other three rebel steamers did not come out from under the guns of the fort. No attempt was made to prevent the iron-clad from getting back. Another visit is expected by daylight, when we shall probably see some warm work."

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH.

No. 12 FORSYTH-ST., New-York, Oct. 1, 1863.

Dr. Von Eisenberg:

DEAR SIR: Without recapitulating the numerous benefits I have received through your wonderful cure of the deafness I have labored under many years, the blessings I enjoy will convince the most skeptical.

I have tried many quacks, in Europe and America, without success. I was still deaf as a post.

Three years ago I entered your office, underwent one operation, hoping, yet doubting, I should receive any relief, but was agreeably disappointed in finding the genius of your profession.

The innate skill you possess cured my deafness in one almost painless operation.

The joy I experienced was indescribable; 'twas a new life to me.

My hearing is perfect to this day.

I strongly advise all who are suffering under a difficulty of hearing, or total deafness, to consult you immediately, as I also personally recommend all who apply to me. The numerous calls tresses on my time and patience, yet, remembering my own long, weary affliction causes me to pity them.

This is not written to advertise your well-known, universally acknowledged reputation—that would be puerile; but sole measure of precaution, it induces all to call on you at once, without troubling me; yet I do not refuse to see any one who comes to me. This is the only way I can show my gratitude.

I now call the attention of those who are suffering from Catarrh, which disease I have labored under one year or more.

I experienced difficulty in breathing, language, heavy sense over the eyes, a sense of tightness on the brain, and copious expectorations of a hard and viscid nature. Accompanying this is a "polypus," quite filling the right nostril. On the 26th ult. you operated on both, killing the polypus, which is gradually passing away, and giving me great relief from the Catarrh. One more operation will effectually cure.

This sentimental brings with it my unalloyed and grateful thanks, with but a poor delineation of your wondrous skill as an Aurist.

I am, Sir, respectfully, gratefully,
EDWARD TEMPLE HARRISON.

CATARRH

DISEASES OF THE EYE, EAR AND THROAT.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.

Extract from Dr. Rowe's Treatise on Catarrh.

It produces a feeling of exuberance, heat and stiffness of the nostrils, which are often closed on one or both sides, caused by the thickening of the membrane from inflammation; soon a thin, watery discharge commences, excoriating that part of the skin with which it comes in contact. If the disease be not checked then, the discharge soon becomes purulent, of a greenish yellow color, sometimes tinged with blood, with an odor more or less disagreeable, and sometimes very offensive. The breath of the patient becomes so exceedingly offensive as to isolate him from society, and render him an object of disgust to himself. The discharge frequently flows down the throat, and has to be hawked up to obtain relief—the sense of smell and taste become greatly impaired, and sometimes entirely lost—a distressing headache makes its appearance as the frontal bone becomes become involved, and neuralgic pain in the face and head in one of the other sinuses becomes affected. At night sleep is often interrupted, a sensation of dryness in the mouth and throat, thirst and flatulence generally being produced. In the morning a coated tongue and a disagreeable taste in the mouth are frequent, as also dizziness. Some persons become very drowsy, more especially during the day, after eating. After a time the memory becomes impaired, a restless, nervous feeling accompanying it, perceptibly affecting a close application to study; in short, a general languor of mind. Many are disposed to be costive. If the inflammation extends through the tear passage to the eye and infiltrate that organ, it causes the tears to overflow upon the slightest irritation or exposure, producing what is commonly called "Weeping Eye." If it extends through the Eustachian tubes to the mitotic ear, the hearing becomes more or less impaired; if it extends down the throat it gives rise to dyspepsia, bronchitis, and to CONSUMPTION. The experience and investigations of the greatest savans in medical science have established the fact that in fully two-thirds of the cases of consumption it commenced by inflammation and ulceration of the air passages. It must be remembered that the best and only cure of consumption is its prevention.

CURE OF CATARRH.

It may not be out of place to mention what I have found to be the absurd idea among some persons that catarrh, if checked, will go to the lungs. The density opposite is the effect. If not checked, it will most assuredly, in most instances, affect the lungs. Never yet was there any one whose health was not better after being cured of catarrh, the treatment being constitutional, as well as local.

Beside the following testimonials, many others can be obtained from Dr. Rowe, of the highest respectability. No such name is used unless strictly in accordance with their permission.

For the benefit of those similarly afflicted, I make the following statement: For ten years my daughter was afflicted with catarrh, which gradually grew worse, until it had so impaired her health that we felt convinced she must die. The discharge from the head and throat was immense, frequently accompanied by blood. After having tried every one and everything in vain, as a last resort I called on Dr. Rowe, under whose care she has permanently cured and restored to the enjoyment of excellent health.

THOMAS S. DAY.

REMARKS ON THE CURE OF DEAFNESS AND DISCHARGES FROM THE EAR.

It can safely be said that there is no case of discharges of the ear, but what can be entirely and permanently cured; and in most cases where, as is usually the case, deafness accompanies it, the hearing can be either entirely or materially improved. Like all diseases, there are some cases of deafness that cannot even be benefited, but in the majority of cases the hearing can either be entirely cured or remarkably benefited. It can always be checked and prevented from growing worse.

It is an erroneous idea that where discharges of the ear are checked it will be thrown in the system, and will make its appearance somewhere else in a more aggravated form. A directly contrary effect have always found in cases that I have treated, the health of the patient being much more robust after the discharge has been checked. I can yet to see a case where it has impaired the health of the patient by being stopped. Let any one diseased to think any injurious effects can arise from his being cleansed ask themselves the question, "Is it natural for the ear to discharge?" Not certainly not. Then can it be beneficial to have an offensive discharge rendering you disgusting to every one with whom you are brought in contact, constantly running from your ears, or can it be injurious to check it?

CAUTION TO PARENTS.

Parents are not to think that their children will outgrow discharges from their ears or catarrhal affections. Never were they laboring under a greater mistake. How many instances are there where they have outgrown them? It must be acknowledged that there have been cases, but they are the exception to the rule, and very few and far between. Cases have come to my knowledge in many cases where they have been allowed to continue unchecked the prominent symptoms of deafness have become confirmed and the organs injured, thus preventing all possibility of restoring the hearing. Is any parent willing to run such a risk?

In catarrh the disease grows with the child, and either constitutes in certain stages very dangerous. These are diseases in children cannot be checked too soon.

GEN. BUTLER'S DEPARTMENT.

The Negroes and How They Are Employed.

The Colonies—The Schools—The Troops.

From our Special Correspondent.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, May 4, 1864.

Through the favor of Lieut.-Col. KIDDER, the General Superintendent of Negro Affairs in the Department of Virginia and North Carolina, I have had access to the quarterly reports of his District Superintendents, just now presented, from which I obtain a good many facts of interest, additional to those mentioned in a former letter. Unfortunately, however, I am unable to present these data either at the length or in the form which their importance would warrant, in consequence of having to leave this place to-day for a more active field of occupation. Hurriedly running through the documents, I make a partial summary of their contents:

HOW THE NEGROES ARE EMPLOYED.

Idleness from choice among these people seems to be exceptional, and instances are not rare where under the sweet stimulus of liberty, even when the physical system has been crippled by hard work and begins to crawl bandage, the most energetic application to business is apparent. One case is mentioned of a poor old man, whose hands bear evidence of intense suffering from felons. His work had been to pile wood; and the continual twisting in which his fingers were subjected produced a succession of these tormentors, until every finger, as well as both thumbs, had passed the severe ordeal. For want of proper care his hands became weak and very greatly distorted. He has now been a freedman about seven months, three of which were spent in the service of the Government, at wages of $10 a month and rations. Failing to get more than one dollar's pay, he left and took up the business of general wood-chopper, at which, in four months, he has managed to earn enough to buy two horses and a clothing wagon, with which to facilitate his work. He has paid upward 200 in money instead.

Many of the women find employment in washing for the soldiers, and in some instances earn a good fair compensation; yet this is found to be a precarious sort of maintenance. Often they work for several weeks, hoping for a very pay-day, when suddenly the soldiers will be ordered away, and they lose as much of their hard-earned wages. Some of the men find oystering quite a profitable employment. Going to Norfolk the other day, I saw at least a dozen oyster-boats on the banks near Craney Island, gathering oysters with tongs or sippers. Each boat contained a man and a boy, the latter opening the bivalves for market as they were dropped from the tongs. A boat may be hired for $3 a week, (which includes the cost of lessons,) and if the man and boy are energetic, will divide at the end of the week or more.

At Roanoke Island, N. C., an effort is in progress to work the fisheries in behalf of the season, and nets and boats have been provided to carry on the business. The season thus far is said to have been very unfavorable for the shad fishery; but plenty have been let out for about one thousand yard, and the catches come for herring, bass, pickerel, mullet and blackfish, following each other in the order named, with brief intervals between, every effort will be made to turn these natural resources of the place to advantage. The capacity of these waters to supply the islanders with fish is unlimited, and any surplus catch might be sent to market with great profit.

The majority of the people throughout the Department who are not engaged in the military service or employed in the Staff, bureaus of the army, are settled upon the abandoned plantations, under a system which aims and necessarily tends and stimulates to self-support. The cultivation of these abandoned estates is for the most part done under the direction of white overseers appointed by the authorities. In a few cases, however, where the negroes show a decided ability and willingness to work without the guidance of the white overseer, they are permitted to take care of themselves. Horses which have been condemned as unfit for military purposes are turned over to the agricultural interest, and hired out to the blacks. Seeds, also, are furnished them and implements for farm work, in return for which the Government is to receive a share of the crop, be it corn, cotton, potatoes or tobacco. In these cases where the farming is done solely on Government account, the wages paid the laborers are $10 per month and rations. In Elizabeth City there are forty farms under cultivation, all of them conducted upon shares with the negro laborers. The Government will receive from emigrants, in one-half the crop made, in proportion to the horses, harnesses, seeds, &c., which have been furnished. At present the crop cows is corn, but preparations are going on for planting corn, potatoes and a few acres of cotton.

In North Carolina, the farming operations are not so extensive as in Virginia, because our lines do not extend far beyond the towns, and it would be unsafe to occupy the plantations; but large numbers of the negroes are there employed in chopping wood, by the cord, for private citizens who are filling contracts for supplying fuel. Others are making turpentine and tapping tar. The census shows that more than two-thirds of the negroes in this District support themselves. The report of Capt. JOHN, the Superintendent of the North Carolina District, gives some interesting facts respecting

THE NEGRO COLONY ON ROANOKE ISLAND.

"At being no part of our policy," says the report, "to locate them together in compact settlements, merely to clothe them and feed them in idleness, the question was early asked, where, without removing them from their native State, can we locate them in safety upon the soil? This quest on was the more pressing in view of the fact that so many able-bodied men were enlisting in the army, leaving their families unprovided for, and looking to us for direction and aid.

In this dilemma Roanoke Island was resorted to, and the location, in some respects, to work admirably in the present, but will in early future, if we live, be well positioned good, certain vegetables, and the best of sweet potatoes. The island is large enough to accommodate five or six thousand people, and give each family an acre of land. Its insular position favors bringing to its shores turpentine and timber from the banks on the east of it, and the mainland on the west, and its waters abound in the best kind of fish throughout the year. Above all, it is deemed safe from the incursions of the enemy.

Here we have commenced to build up a Freedmen's commonwealth, the foundations of another Massachusetts town have been laid. Broad streets, three or four miles long, bearing the names of LINCOLN and BUTLER, crossed at right angles by narrower streets, lined with cottages, which have been built by the occupants from timber which grows on their lots, give already the appearance of civilization to a region that was thought wanting since and unknown since. The people seem very comfortable, contented and happy in being permitted to hold property and in being free. The town real estate proves the strongest possible incentive to manhood and independence. The plan of a municipal government has been established, and the fifteen councillors, at their stated meetings, in gravely discuss and so decently make the welfare of the new municipality, as though they had been elected in a New-England town, or were clothed with the ermine of a judge."

THE NEGRO SCHOOLS.

I think there can be no question that the response of these people to opportunities for instruction, is both earnest and prompt. The schools are mainly under the charge of teachers, male and female, sent out by charitable societies at the North, such as the Freedmen's Aid organizations of New-York and Boston; but in some instances colored people performed the part of instructors. The only material compensation which these philanthropic persons receive (white and black) is, as a general rule, the sum of $30 per month for principals and $20 for assistants—the money being supplied by the benevolent institutions—and the Government gratuitously furnishing fuel and quarters, with one daily ration. In the first district there are only four schools in operation, having an average attendance of 700 pupils.

SEE NINTH PAGE—SUPPLEMENT.

[illegible] the Sanitary Commission in the Hospitals of Philadelphia, the Commission has held in the kitchen of one of the hospitals and there were brought to be cooked for the sick and convalescent patients more than the room would hold. A temperance war of extent by inducing a class of men the morning, and another class of 60 in the afternoon. Some of these people at Yorktown have been brought to mind by Mr. William Bunnell, of Philadelphia, who visited their cabins daily and wrote on each occasion a different letter of thanksgiving. His people cheerfully learned the letter, and by the process at the end of twenty-six days the alphabet was mastered by both children and adults.

In the contest district there are ten schools, having 1,000 pupils, and an evening school composed of those who cannot attend the day school, numbering 200. The school is taught by the teachers of the day schools, assisted by fifty volunteers. There is an industrial school at Portsmouth, under the charge of Miss Susan Dammond, and another school of the same character on the plantation of Ex-Gov. Wise, where 100 females are taught sewing. There is also an Sale-street, Norfolk, a shoemaking shop, at which cobbling is done for the children who attend the schools, mainly without charge, the stock being purchased gratuitously from New-York.

In the North Carolina district there are about twenty-four schools in successful operation, having an attendance of 2,701. Four of these schools are exclusively for white children, who number about 200. There are evening schools besides. The schools in this district have been seriously interrupted during the past Winter by the occurrence of the campaign. At one time it was almost thought necessary to close them, and religious meetings of the colored people at Newbern were ordered suspended for two months for this cause. Of the 2,531 people who are reported in the census returns of this district as being able to read, three-fourths at least have learned during the eight months since the establishment of the schools. The progress of the pupils in such that a system of grading the schools has been decided upon, and a grammar school has been projected.

FEEDING THE NEGROES AND THE COST THEREOF.

One important item of expenditure by the Government is the cost of feeding the negroes. At first, in the early days of the war, the rations issued did not materially differ either in quality or quantity from that given to soldiers. This plan, besides being very expensive, was not the best to other accounts. The blacks, accustomed to rather feed than made master's weekly dole of meal, molasses and an occasional piece of salted pork, grew sickly on the prodigal fare which Uncle Sam bestowed. They are now supplied in a more economical manner with provisions which suits them better. The last monthly returns show that 10,217 of the destitute creatures received food from the Government. The cost of these rations for the four months ending March 31, 1864 footed up the handsome sum of $[illegible], at the commuted value of thirteen cents per single ration. Fully one-third of this expense is incurred by the Government in supporting the families of soldiers and in fulfilment of the contract under which the negro soldiers have enlisted. Now that the pay of these colored troops has been increased to that of the white, to wholly then one measure of this and to the families of enlisted men will be made. The number of the dependents upon the charity of the Government is, however, constantly diminishing, and a moderate price on the part of the people to take care of themselves is being substituted by judicious measures.

The other cash expenditures at the Superintendent of Negro Affairs per month are about $7,000. This sum is devoted to the payment of Assistant Superintendents who receive $60 per month, and to the wages of laborers engaged in wood-chopping, cabin-building, and other services connected with sheltering the escaped and destitute.

CLOTHING THE NEGROES.

One of the greatest troubles with which Lieut.-Col. Kneeland has had to contend during the past winter, was a lack of proper clothing for distribution to the poor and destitute. True, the various Benevolent Societies at the North and charitable individuals have contributed lavishly, but the demand for garments has far exceeded the supply, and through the winter there was a great deal of suffering.

THE NEGRO TROOPS.

I expected to have given a description of the encampment of negro soldiers, and of brigade maneuvering at Camp Hamilton, near Hampton, but am not able at present. I can only say that each arm of the service—in infantry, cavalry and artillery, is well represented, and in numbers amount to that military quantity known as a division. As to drill, these troops are in a fairly efficient condition, and express themselves ready to fight, fully understanding what has occurred at Fort Pillow. I have no doubt either of their ability or inclination to do good service when the time comes. H. J. W.

OUR NASHVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

Care of the Government for Its Sick and Wounded—Hospitals in Nashville—How the Patients are Lodged, Clothed and Fed—The Sanitary and Christian Commissions as Hospital Auxiliaries—Cumberland Hospital.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, Friday, May 6, 1864.

The United States Government is certainly careful of the comfort and welfare of its sick and wounded soldiers. This fact, when the war is over, will constitute one of the distinguished badges of its honor in the eyes of every Christian nation. The brave men who fight at the behest of a Government are entitled not merely to protection; they deserve to be cherished, in the camp and on the battle-field, as far as can be, but especially in the hospital, where the hardships, exposures and perils of a soldier's life drop out over all the land in sadly luxurious harvests of maimed, lacerated and malady-stricken forms.

To say that the Government has made merely liberal provision for its sick and wounded is not warm enough praise. To say that the wants of the suffering soldier have been looked at with thoughtful and discriminating attention, and with the purpose to bring science, skill, experience—the mind's fingers and the hearty charity, all backed by a strong nation's resources—to bear upon our disabled braves, to soothe, strengthen and save them; to say that this appreciative care has been bestowed, and this high humane purpose carried out during this rebellion, to the honor of the Government and the joy of many thousands of the suffering, is to say, what the simplest facts in the case fully warrant, and some save the ignorant or untruthful will deny.

I purpose to devote a few paragraphs to the hospitals of Nashville, thinking the subject to possess interest enough to be worthy of a column in the Times; an additional column I may say, remembering how city the general matter has already been presented there. The Government hospitals here are substantially what the hospitals are elsewhere, the same general features marking them all, and the same system, working in operation a common result—order, efficiency—in reaching the patient's highest good.

Hospitals have been numerous in Nashville from its first occupancy by the Union forces in February, 1862, shortly after the fall of Donelson, and this from the necessity of the case. Many wounded men, the fruit of that terrible struggle, demanded immediate hospital accommodations here. The proximity of large armies ever since, with their unceasing contributions of sick men, together with those supplied by skirmishes, guerrilla attacks, sharp fights by detachments, at various points radiating from Nashville as a base, and bloody battles on a great scale, such as Stone River, and those about Chattanooga, will show why many and large hospitals here have continued a necessity. The number, in fact, has been as high as twenty-five, several of these being the most spacious public buildings in Nashville. The two large buildings of the Female University, three educational institutions for males and females, spacious and tastily constructed; an immense gas factory, capable of accommodating a thousand beds, all of which are occasionally filled; the fullest and deepest business houses on Nashville-

[illegible] Cumberland Hospital.

[illegible] Hospital, lying on the outskirts of the city toward the west, is one not included in those referred to, but deserves, as the largest hospital here, a little special notice. This is a tent hospital, and was gotten ready to receive patients early last Fall. Its situation is fine, being on a bluff commanding a wide view of the surrounding country, enjoying pure air as well as picturesque scenery. Its area is about 40 acres. It has 6 rows of double-tents, 24 tents in a row, giving an aggregate of 288 tents. To each of these tents are assigned 12 beds, making 2,304 beds in all. Two thousand patients have been accommodated here, and this number is regarded as a fair complement for the hospital. Its force of surgeons, besides the Surgeon-in-charge, is twenty. To do the ordinary writing, &c. of the establishment, requires 14 clerks. In addition, there are 3 property clerks, 6 in the dispensary, and commissary clerks. The laundry employs 17 hands; the baggage-room 2, the operating-room 2, the special diet kitchen 1, while 8 are employed in the engine-room, to control the pumping, heating, drying, and wood-sawing power that has its source there. The hospital guard, including 5 policemen, numbers 27. The services of two carpenters are also needed, a postmaster, a sutler, with sundry attendants for the dining and bath rooms, drivers for the hospital wagons, servants to officers, &c., the whole being under the direction of Dr. Mollenzahn, of Dayton, Ohio, now a veteran in the volunteer service, and an officer of rare skill and efficiency in the management of such a concern.

This detail will show something of the character, appointments and magnitude of the hospital department of the United States Army. It will show the tenderness care which the Government has bestowed and is bestowing on the sick and wounded of its soldiers. It will show the enormous cost at which a suitable provision for them is maintained. It will show that the comfort of the disabled warrior is not left to accident or luck; but is secured, as far as an enlightened regard for human suffering, and the best adapted appliances of human skill and experience, can secure it. And it will show that the countless home-circles, from which the young, and noble, and tenderly-endeared have gone forth in the cause of an imperiled country, may be relieved from the anguish of feeling that their loved ones, prostrated by wounds or disease, are left unregarded, or without proper care and attention, to bleed, languish and die. The Government has guarded with anxious vigilance against all this. Its paternal care has taken, all over the land, the form of a beautiful system of leisure and appliances, aiming at the relief, comfort and healing of the maimed and war bruised. And the soldier's kin and friends may feel and know, and take comfort as they do so, that if the fate of war should number their most cherished ones among the hosts whom sickness seized or bullets pierced, they will find on the hospital couch the ministry of kind and skillful hands to soothe and mitigate their pangs, and, if God will, win them back to health.

The President on Gen. Grant's Success.

The Washington Republican says on the receipt of the confirmatory news of Gen. GRANT's success, it was proposed to serenade the President. The idea was acted upon by at least two thousand people, who, by half-past eight o'clock, assembled in front of William's Hotel. Fortunately, the band of the Twenty-seventh Michigan Regiment, Col. FOX, happened in front of the hotel to serenade their Colonel.

After serenading their Colonel, the band, through its leader, Mr. W. [illegible], volunteered to escort the procession to the Presidential mansion.

The first piece played was "Hail to the Chief," which was performed with inspiring effect. The assemblage had by this time numbered several thousands, including many ladies. After the band ceased playing Frederick Douglass came out of the mansion to the portico. Senator FOSTER, of Connecticut, then approached the President and said that Col. FOX's band, of the Twenty-seventh Michigan Regiment, now on the way to the front to join the old Ninth Corps, under the gallant BURNSIDE, had called to pay their respects to the Chief Magistrate of the country before they went to the field, which has been made glorious by transactions of the past few days, where they expected to gather new laurels by a patriotic defence of their country and the Union.

The President then said:

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I am very much obliged to you for the compliment of this call, though I apprehend it is owing more to the good news received to-day from the army than to a desire to see me. I am, indeed, very grateful to the brave men who have been struggling with the enemy in the field, to their noble commanders who have directed them, and especially to our Maker. Our Commanders are following up their victories resolutely and successfully. I think, without knowing the particulars of the plans of Gen. GRANT, that what has been accomplished is of more importance than at first appears. I believe I know, (and am especially grateful to know) that Gen. GRANT has not been jostled in his purposes; that he has made all his points, and to-day he is on his line as he purposed before he moved his armies. I will volunteer to say that I am very glad at whatever happened; but there is a great deal still to be done. While we are grateful to all the brave men and officers for the events of the past few days, we should, above all, be very grateful to Almighty God, who gives us victory.

There is enough yet before us requiring all loyal men and patriots to perform their share of the labor and follow the example of the modest General at the head of our armies, and disk all personal considerations for the sake of the country. I commend you to keep yourselves in the same tranquil mood that is characteristic of that brave and loyal man. I have said more than I expected when I came before you, repeating my thanks for this call, I bid you good-bye. (Cheers.)

At the conclusion of these remarks, three times three cheers were given for the President, and a smaller number for Gen. GRANT and our gallant armies.

The multitude seemed disinclined to leave after the band was through playing, and crowded around the President, and began to shake him by the hand, which continued for some half an hour. It was a perfect ovation.

The assemblage then proceeded to the residence of Secretary SEWARD. The band played several airs, but it was that gentleman was not at home the occasion was quietly dispersed.

The band then proceeded to William's Hotel, where a complimentary serenade was served up to them, forming the profession of Mr. CHADWICK, of the firm of SYMES, CHADWICK & Co., after which they played a favorite [illegible] in front of the hotel.

HEADQUARTERS NAVY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF ORDNANCE, WASHINGTON, May 4, 1864.

To the Militia of Kentucky:

GENERAL ORDERS No. 4.—The Secretary of War has authorized the enlistment of ten thousand troops in Kentucky, for six months' service.

The last campaign of this terrible war is pending. The veteran soldiers among us are required at the front, to overwhelm the enemy, and the Government wishes to intrust its property and safety to your hands. Let every man enlist for this short term who wishes a termination of the war. Do not wait for special authorities from the State, but organize at once—at the posts of Louisa, Frankfort, Lexington, Burnside Point, Munfordville, Bowling Green, Louisville and Paducah.

Company and regimental organizations will be formed in the same way, and with the same numbers, as in commands for longer terms of service. The pay is the same. Commissions will only be given to those who recruit the men, and every patriot is hereby authorized to enlist and forward to some point of rendezvous all that wish to serve their struggling country.

But a short time is given to organize this force. It is confidently believed that this appeal to Kentuckians by their Government will be gallantly answered.

The following named gentlemen are hereby specially requested to act at their several stations as agents for the State of Kentucky, to superintend and direct the organization of the troops as they report:

Louisa—Hon. Lazar T. Moore, Col. G. W. Gallup.
Frankfort—These Headquarters.
Lexington—Headquarters of Brig.-Gen. Burbridge, Capt. Thos. E. Moore, Provost-Marshal.
Burnside Point—Col. F. N. Alexander.
Munfordville—Col. Sanders D. Bruce, Hon. Geo. T. Wood.
Bowling Green—Col. Cicero Maxwell, Col. F. B. Hawkins.
Louisville—Col. J. W. Scott, Col. A. J. Harrington.
Paducah—Hon. R. K. Williams, Maj. Willie Walker.
By command of the Governor.

JOHN BOYLE, Adjt.-Gen. of Kentucky.

ILLINOIS.

STATE OF ILLINOIS, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, SPRINGFIELD, May 9, 1864.

To the loyal Press of Illinois:

Important dispatches from Washington, just received, constrain me again to appeal to the loyal people of the State to promptly respond to the late call of the President for 20,000 volunteers for 100 days' service, and to invoke your powerful influence in arousing the people to immediate action. This is the more necessary because of the treasonable efforts of the disloyal press of the State to discourage enlistments, and thus prevent our veteran regiments, now doing garrison duty, from being relieved by these new troops, and taking the front with Gen. GRANT in the great campaign which he has just commenced.

There are now on file in the office of the Adjutant-General applications for 200 companies which have been authorized to be raised, and it is probable that ten thousand volunteers have already enlisted; but only nine days now remain for raising the balance, and the greatest activity is necessary to complete our quota. These troops are wanted immediately. I submit these facts to the loyal people of the State. The crisis is upon us. I confidently await the response.

The policy adopted and the plan for raising and organizing these troops will be found in the accompanying order of the Adjutant-General.

(Signed) RICHARD YATES, Governor.

The Army of West Virginia.

From the Philadelphia North American, May 11.

It was recently announced that the National Government had taken all the steamers on the Ohio River to be used as transports to convey troops. Subsequently it was ascertained that by this means something like a full corps d'armée had been landed at Parkersburgh, and marched thence into the valley of the Kanawha River. Accounts both from rebel and Union sources, agree in making this force about twenty-seven thousand men, of which the cavalry, a strong body, is commanded by Gen. AVERELL. These troopers appear to march in advance of the main corps a considerable distance, and they have already reached and taken a position on the line of the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad. The remainder of the corps, commanded by Gen. CROOK, has, at the latest advices, reached Princeton, at the Western base of the mountains, on his way to follow up AVERELL's route.

As the mere destruction of a railroad which has already been rendered useless by our possession of East Tennessee, and the whole line of its Southern communications could hardly justify sending a full corps on such a long and difficult journey, it is a proper surmise what is the object of this expedition. This is stated in many quarters to be Lynchburgh, Va. On reaching the railroad, the most obvious plan would be for the corps to follow the route of the railroad through the valley to Lynchburgh, which is a large and important city at the junction of two lines of railway, leading to Richmond by various routes. After taking that city these two lines of railway would be held and rendered useless or destroyed, when the army could advance east to Burkeville, another important junction of railways, and commanding the only remaining Southern railroad leading to Richmond.

If these operations be conducted with sufficient vigor, the southern communications of the rebel capital will be destroyed before LEE can reach Richmond on his retreat, and the Army of West Virginia, uniting with BUTLER, could assault Richmond from the south, with a prospect of taking it. Such we presume to be the direction events are now taking in southern Virginia, and it will sufficiently account for the precipitancy of LEE's retreat, and the haste with which GRANT follows him. Whether LEE reaches Richmond or not, the manner in which GRANT follows him assures the safety and success of both CROOK's and BUTLER's operations.

The Late Gen. Hays.

The following is the dispatch of Secretary STANTON, announcing the death of Gen. HAYS to his friends in Pittsburgh:

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, May 8, 8 P. M.

HON. THOS. M. HOYS: I deeply regret to inform you that intelligence has just reached this department that in the engagement near Chancellorsville, on Thursday, Brig.-Gen. ALEXANDER HAYS, of Pittsburgh, was killed at the head of his command, while gallantly maintaining his position against a superior force. His remains are believed to be in possession of our forces; but there is no means of communication with the army. You will please communicate this sad intelligence to Mr. JOHN B. MCFARLAND, and the family of Gen. HAYS. The remains will be forwarded as soon as they reach Washington, which may not be for some days, as the army is between 30 and 40 miles in advance of railroad or telegraphic communication, and there is no means of transportation. No casualties to any other officers are reported.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

A Railroad Disaster.

COLLISION OF TRAINS NEAR GALLATIN—THREE MEN KILLED AND SIXTY WOUNDED—PARTIAL LIST OF THE CASUALTIES.

From the Nashville Union, May 5.

Early yesterday morning a frightful railroad accident occurred a short distance beyond Gallatin, in which three persons lost their lives, and about sixty others were wounded—some mortally. It arose from a collision between a construction train from this place and the passenger train due here at daylight, but which had been delayed from some cause unknown.

The passenger train was loaded with a detachment of the Tenth Indiana Cavalry, numbering, in all, nearly three hundred men. We were unable to learn the particulars as to how the collision occurred, but the trains came with such momentum, that seven cars were completely broken up.

Both engines were completely ruined, and some of the firemen were among those who received severe injuries. As to who was to blame for this terrible calamity, we are unable to give any satisfactory statement; but we have no doubt but Gen. ROSSEAU will have the subject investigated, and if the accident occurred from negligence, will punish the guilty parties.

The sufferers were as well taken care of as the situation would admit, and the dead were laid away till intelligence could reach their friends in Indiana.

The track was cleared last night, but not without considerable delay to the down passenger train, which should have arrived at 6½ P. M.

The following officers were among the victims of the disaster:

Capt. JONES, badly wounded, left leg.
Lieut. LITTLEFIELD, arm and leg broken.
Lieut. COUCH, mortally wounded.
Lieut. BERRY, badly injured.

SEIZURE OF ARMS AND MUNITIONS OF WAR IN ST. LOUIS.—Yesterday, at noon, Col. J. P. SANDERSON, Provost-Marshal-General, received information that a large quantity of arms and munitions of war were about to be shipped for Memphis, Tenn., and thence to be smuggled through the lines for the benefit of our "erring Southern sisters."

Col. S. according sent one of his most trusty detectives to the boat on which the boxes were to be shipped, who found three boxes marked "JAMES LETCHER, Memphis, Tenn." and said to contain "eggs."

The "eggs" were immediately placed in a car and brought to the Provost-Marshal-General's office, corner of Fifth and St. Charles streets, and upon the boxes being opened the "eggs" were found to be 504 (lbs.) cans rifle-powder, 10,000 gun-caps and three bags of shot.

These articles were packed in the boxes and covered with layers of eggs.

The person who had charge of these "eggs" was immediately arrested, and is now in durance vile, where he will probably remain for some time to come.

The seizure, taken together with other movements of greater importance, the nature of which will shortly transpire, show that the energy and life has been infused into the Provost-Marshal system in the department since the advent of Col. SANDERSON, and may be taken as a sample of the thorough and complete manner in which those traitors and secessionists in our very midst will be ferreted out and brought to justice.—St. Louis Union, May 7.

GOUPIL & CO.'S ENTIRE COLLECTION OF FOREIGN PAINTINGS.—HENRY H. LEEDS & MINER will sell, at auction, on THURSDAY and FRIDAY EVENINGS, May 12 and 13, at 7½ o'clock, at the Old Dusseldorf Gallery, No. 548 Broadway, next door below Tiffany & Co.'s, Goupil & Co.'s entire collection of foreign paintings, of great value, with many fine examples of the American school. L. Muller,

"MARIE ANTOINETTE IN PRISON."

"THE STANDARD BEARER,"

the largest picture ever seen in America by Verboeckhoven—of a "Bull Fight;" one of the largest and best of H. Schlesinger's works, "The Toilet;" two very charming subjects by the popular Ed. Frere; and choice selections from the works of Landelle, Ziem, Jouffroche, Chavet, Trayer, Van Huyden, Beranger, Valerie, Troyon, Gude, Petit, Caille, Bourges, Lambinet, Comte, Calix, Thom, Couturier, Lemmens, Theo. And we take pleasure in announcing that one work of the very highest merit and of great historic value, the colored picture by JOHN VANDERLYN of the finest work of the artist, and long acknowledged the most beautiful as it is the most refined nude figure ever painted by an American, and is well known by the best line engraving ever done in this country, by the distinguished artist, A. B. DURAND.

The very high standing of the house of Messrs. GOUPIL, their reputation for taste, and the many advantages they possess for selection through their extensive trade in the art capitals of Europe, have always given their importations advantages over all other parties. At this time, too, their collection offers particular inducements to collectors, as the new tariff and constantly increasing high rates of exchange must nearly altogether preclude further importations.

Full particulars, with catalogues, will shortly be ready.

The collection will be on exhibition at the Dusseldorf Gallery, No. 548 Broadway, on THURSDAY, May 5, continuing open day and evening until the nights of sale.
